

WESTERN NEW YORK IS

POLITICAL BATTLEFIELD

Buffalo, N. Y. — Western New York is not at all phlegmatic about the presidential campaign. This is strong Republican territory but able to keep the vote of his opponents down and on two out of five occasions has carried the city of Buffalo.

The job of the Republicans here is to increase the normal vote so as to help offset the known increase which Governor Smith will have in New York City and the lower end of the state.

Governor Smith appears to have kept much of his following here, but, of course, the test before has been on state rather than national issues and the Republicans are confident that the traditional feeling of the Republicans who vote a straight ticket in presidential years but scratches it on state campaigns will abide.

Herbert Hoover may be expected to carry western New York by a substantial majority. But to be of any help to overcome New York City majorities he has to win every county by something. In the fifty rural counties, the Republicans have started an intensive campaign. W. G. Andrews, one of the younger men in politics, has been made chairman of the campaign committee and is starting a drive for new voters. The feeling here is that the increased Republican vote must come from new voters. Various plans to corral the new voters are being made. No lists, of course, are available so the Republican newspapers are to carry coupons asking for the names of new voters and a meeting of as many as will attend will be held later in the campaign.

DRY ISSUE IS PUZZLE
The Republicans are having some difficulty with the prohibition issue and have not yet developed a clear-cut way of handling it as the city of Buffalo is wet territory but lately the slogan "We Would Rather Eat Than Drink" has been effectively distributed in the factory districts where the usual argument about republican prosperity is being made. Not since the McKinley days has such a dry campaign been made as is planned for the factory vote. Meetings to be addressed by prominent speakers are being arranged and the Republican management is working on the theory that every vote gained this time in western New York will be worth more than is customary in the total vote of the state.

Sentiment for the governor is strong in the factory districts and there is also a battle to line up the foreign-born vote where defections toward the Smith stand have been noted. The duties are not which enough to give adequate protection to some of the products of the farm, and I believe it is the duty of congress to provide rates high enough to protect such products against foreign competition. In addition, by this act, the duties have been lowered on most of the articles the farmers buy or they have been put upon the free list.

"Appropriations have been made to aid the farmers in time of crop failures. The federal farm loan system and the intermediate credit banks have made available to farmers, on loans at a low rate of interest, more than $2,500,000,000.

U. S. TO REMAIN ALOOF ON ALLIES-GERMAN QUESTION

Washington — (AP) — Holding to America's historic policy of aloofness from European affairs, President Coolidge feels that whatever part the Washington government might take in the proposed commissions to study the evacuation of troops from German territory still depends on the form and conditions in which it is to participate.

He believes that these subjects lie outside the general interest of the United States and are essentially European questions. As yet no invitation to take part in such discussions has been received.

With respect to the Franco-British naval understanding, Mr. Coolidge wishes it made clear that the agreement can have no effect upon American naval plans. America's position on auxiliary war craft, he feels is well known, especially since it was clearly pronounced at the Geneva conference of last year and he holds that the agreement between Great Britain and France must have been reached with a full knowledge and understanding of the attitude of the Washington government.

7 KILLED IN ROCKFORD TORNADO

CURTIS GIVES PARTY PLAN TO HELP FARMER

Higher Tariff and Better Marketing System Are Required, Senator Says

Lexington, Ky. — (AP) — Higher tariff protection and improved marketing systems were set up as two of the principal needs of agriculture by Senator Curtis, the Republican vice presidential nominee, in an address here Saturday, opening his long campaign trip through the west.

Senator Curtis said his party was ready to seek adjustment of both propositions and he declared Herbert Hoover "will keep his promise" to call a conference of interested parties in seeking the necessary legislation. Frankly, he stated that "there exists today a depression in agriculture which, in the best interests of all the people must be relieved."

"The encouragement of agriculture always has been a Republican doctrine," he declared. "It is a necessary part of our philosophy of government. Agriculture is the basic industry of the country and in the very nature of things will ever be so."

"Tariff protection on farm products is an important means by which to relieve the present depression in agriculture and to place the farmer in a position of economic equality with our other industries, but in considering tariff rates as a means for meeting the problems of agriculture, the danger of undue reliance on the effectiveness of this method must be avoided. The tariff is not the remedy for all the economic ills of the farmer and stock raiser, but where it will help, it should be applied."

NEED MARKET SYSTEM
"Many of the farmers' ills are the result of the war and of post-war conditions generally; others are, in part at least the result of maladjustments of our distributive system—a lack of proper marketing facilities. Cooperative associations have done much to relieve this latter difficulty and if properly extended, will, in my judgment, bring still greater relief."

"Tariff protection against foreign competition always has been given to farm products by the Republican party. The Fordney-McCumber tariff act carries higher rates of duty on agricultural products than any tariff law in the history of the nation. It has been found that certain of the duties are not which enough to give adequate protection to some of the products of the farm, and I believe it is the duty of congress to provide rates high enough to protect such products against foreign competition. In addition, by this act, the duties have been lowered on most of the articles the farmers buy or they have been put upon the free list."

"Appropriations have been made to aid the farmers in time of crop failures. The federal farm loan system and the intermediate credit banks have made available to farmers, on loans at a low rate of interest, more than $2,500,000,000.

Shepherd Dog Rescues Woman From Angry Bull

Menominee, Mich. — (AP) — Attacked by a bull, Mrs. Mary Kmecheck, 60, widow farm woman living at Birch Creek, near Menominee, had been knocked down three times when she was rescued by her shepherd dog, Flossie.

Mrs. Kmecheck was brought here Friday, cut and battered down by the head, her body lacerated and bruised, and three ribs broken. Her chest was crushed from the hoofs of the bull.

In the battle Mrs. Kmecheck's clothing was torn to rags. She went to the barn yard at 5 o'clock to drive the cows into the barn for milking. The bull objected to being separated from the herd and attacked.

Flossie made a counterattack at the heels of the bull. Three times the woman was knocked down before the dog sank her teeth into a hind leg of the bull and held on until Mrs. Kmecheck, almost senseless from her injuries, managed to drag herself to a platform at the granary, where she collapsed.

Flossie finally managed to rout the bull, and ran to the farmhouse and aroused Mrs. Kmecheck's son, who was still sleeping, guiding him to his mother.

Hold 2 Men In Kidnaping Of Young Boy

Ranieri Former Employee and Billy's Godfather Are Under Arrest

Chicago — (AP) — Two men were held on kidnaping charges Saturday as the deadline approached for the requested $60,000 payment to abductors of 10-year-old Billy Ranieri.

Salvatore Mastroianni, godfather of the boy, was held when police said he declared he had acted as agent in negotiating for payment of the ransom demanded for the boy's safe return to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Frank Ranieri. Renold Schiedo, alias "the Skid," a former employer of the boy's father, was also held.

Squads of detectives with guns and tear bombs left immediately after police heard Mastroianni's story. They headed for Mastroianni's destination, apparently in the hope of locating the kidnapped boy and rescuing him.

HUNT THIRD MAN
Police also sought Tom Dominick, alias Tom Dyer, who was mentioned by Mastroianni as a third party, told by the kidnapers "to walk the streets with Ranieri until they should meet the right persons."

Police were sent to arrest Angelo Pettiti, who, they believed, had been working with the boy's father, independently of authorities. Ranieri persisted in his attempts to discourage police from searching for his son.

"In 24 hours I'll get my boy back, if you keep out of it," he told police. Ranieri told the kidnapers, he said, that he would not and could not pay the ransom, despite their threats to kill the boy if the $60,000 were not paid Saturday.

FOILS ATTEMPT TO BOMB ADLER PLANT

Night Watchman Tosses Explosive Back into Street at Waukesha

Waukesha — (AP) — A branch plant of the David Adler and Sons company in the south section of Waukesha was damaged Friday night by a bomb, wrapped in newspapers, which exploded in front of the one story building.

The structure was saved from destruction by the agility of a night watchman in hurling the smoking object into the street after it had been tossed against the front door by one of four men who passed in a touring car.

An instant after the watchman had thrown the bomb outside it exploded with a terrific detonation that was heard throughout Waukesha. Every window pane in the factory was shattered.

Two men were injured by the blast. They are Nelson R. Jarden, the watchman, who received a fractured right leg, lacerated face and arms and possibly internal injuries, and Peter Petroski, plant foreman. A strike has been in progress at the Milwaukee Adler plant for several months.

CHARGE MAN DIDN'T SUPPORT HIS FAMILY

Edward Bertschy, arrested at Howard Grove, Sheboygan, Friday afternoon, was arraigned in municipal court before Judge Theodore Bery Saturday morning on a charge of non-support and his preliminary hearing was set for Sept. 28. Bertschy was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Walter Schorck on complaint of Mrs. Ida Bertschy, his wife, who charged he failed to support her and their three minor children. Up to noon he had not furnished $50 bonds and was being held in the county jail.

BEGIN COUNT OF DEATHS IN ISLAND STORM

Damage Runs High into Millions—Tens of Thousands Are Homeless

Havana — (AP) — Dispatches reaching Havana from the stricken zone of Porto Rico indicate one of the greatest disasters in the history of Caribbean hurricanes. It is estimated that 70 per cent of the homes in San Juan and 80 per cent of the business buildings were destroyed. Approximately one-third of the city's total population is believed to be without shelter.

BULLETIN
Washington — (AP) — The American Red Cross Saturday received a message from Catherine Cameron, head of its chapter at St. Croix, Virgin Islands, saying that a "terrible hurricane" had hit there and appealing for assistance.

New York — (AP) — Ten persons are dead in Ponce, Porto Rico, and 700 homeless, many of them in hospitals, injured, as a result of the hurricane which swept that island Thursday and Friday, the All America Cable company learned from its manager there Saturday.

The message from Ponce is the first detailed descriptive matter of the results of the hurricane on the south coast of Porto Rico that has reached New York. While it did not indicate as extensive damage as at San Juan, on the north coast, the hurricane caused a heavy loss of life and property on the south coast also.

Low lying parts of Ponce have been inundated, the message said. Large numbers of frame houses were demolished. Electric light, telephone and telegraph systems were completely disorganized.

As far as could be ascertained with the meager land line communications available, the coffee crop was completely ruined.

THOUSANDS HOMELESS
San Juan, Porto Rico — (AP) — With tens of thousands of persons estimated to be homeless, efforts were under way Saturday to avert famine and disease which it was feared would follow in the wake of the tropical hurricane that struck on Tuesday.

While no deaths had been reported, the authorities thought that as soon as communication has been established with other points on the island fatalities would become known.

Full relief and reconstruction, Governor Horace Towner said, would probably reach into millions. He placed the homeless at tens of thousands and described the destruction of homes and property as "immense," practically all frame structures being destroyed.

Immediate aid from all agencies was said to be vital by Thomas E. Benner, chancellor of the University of Porto Rico who made a survey of the city within a seven mile radius. He added:

"Fruits and vegetables will supply abundance for a few days. Beyond that is famine. Medical supplies, food and shelter are needed at once."

COMMUNICATION CUT
The telephone system was demolished with miles of wires down. Reports from other parts of the island continued meagre and unverified.

The first automobile from Caracas, about 20 miles south of San Juan, made its way here Friday afternoon. The driver said Caracas was "flat." This municipality has a population of about 35,000 and is in one of the greatest tobacco growing sections of the island.

Much of the shipping in the harbor was either sunk or ashore. All banks were closed, due to the inadequacy of transportation.

The 600 foot towers of the navy radio station at Vayez, 30 miles south of San Juan, were reported to be down and wireless communication was halted.

Governor Towner said he had no Turn to page 17 col. 2

'Murder Farm' Story Of Boy Is Partly Verified

Los Angeles — (AP) — The story of a "murder farm" near Riverside, Calif., on which four boys met their deaths, as told by a 15-year-old prisoner at the place, was declared by the police Saturday to have been verified at least in part by an inspection of graves on the three acre farm.

Although none of the three bodies declared by Sanford Clark, 15, to have been buried in and near the children's house on the ranch property could be found, detectives said the graves were located and indications found that bodies or other objects either had been removed recently or had been treated with quick lime.

A boy's head was found in one of the graves. It was believed to be the head of a deceased body found near Puente, Calif., last month.

Officers here questioned Cyrus George Northcott, 57, owner of the ranch, who was held as a material witness. A coastwide hunt has been ordered for Northcott's 21-year-old son, Stewart Gordon Northcott, and his mother, Mrs. Louise Northcott. The officers said young Northcott was believed to have fled to Canada after Clark's arrest by immigration officers, investigating his entry into the United States.

The boys who young Clark said had been slain on the Northcott ranch were Louis and Nelson Winslow, of Pomona, 12 and 9, respectively, who had been sought as missing for several months; Walter Collins, 9, of Los Angeles, and the deca-

Considerable Loss In Wake Of Badger Storm

Milwaukee — (AP) — High winds and an electrical storm did much damage throughout Wisconsin Friday. They demolished buildings, uprooted trees, tore down wires and damaged crops in an area in which Magnolia, near Janesville, was the center. The damage there was caused by the storm which spent its greatest fury in Rockford, Ill., Friday afternoon.

Heavy rains caused rivers in central Wisconsin to swell and they were reported Saturday morning still rising. The Black river was 12 feet above normal. The Hatfield dam was opened to maximum but the river continued to rise.

The Wisconsin and Prairie rivers were rising so fast that the rise was most perceptible to watchers at Merrill.

At Two Rivers, a woman narrowly escaped death and five head of cattle were killed by lightning when an electrical storm swept the country near the village of Rockland. Mrs. August Haec was stunned by a lightning bolt which killed two cows beside her while she sat milking another. Three cows on the farm were killed two hours later.

TWO MEN INJURED
Janesville — (AP) — Two men were injured, hundreds of buildings damaged and several demolished, tobacco and corn crops destroyed when the tail of the Rockford tornado struck Magnolia.

Grant Howard, was standing in the window of the general store when the gust of wind blew the glass in cutting him severely about the face and body. John Baringer, 77, a farmer, was slightly injured.

SCHINKE TO FACE COURT ON SEPT. 27

Furnishes $1,000 Bond to Appear for Hearing on Manslaughter Charge

Alvin Schinke, 34 1124 N. Richmond-st. was arraigned in municipal court before Judge Theodore Berg Saturday morning on a charge of fourth degree manslaughter and his preliminary hearing was set for Sept. 27. Bonds of $1,000 were furnished.

Schinke is being held in connection with the death of Edward Gastrock, 35, 918 S. Warden-ave. who died Friday morning at St. Elizabeth hospital after peritonitis, set in, due to internal injuries received Wednesday, Sept. 5, while at work at the Riverside Fibre and paper company.

Both Schinke and Gastrock were employed on the unloading crew of the paper mill and they had just finished unloading a car of lime and were using an air pressure hose, carrying 80 pounds pressure, to clean the clinging particles of lime from the sides of the car.

Gastrock's clothing was captured by a compressed air hose in the hands of Schinke while the pair was blowing lime dust from their clothing.

SERVE WARRANT
The warrant was served Saturday morning by undersheriff Otto Wikert and Deputy Scherck.

Mr. Gastrock was born in Middleton, Pa., April 11, 1903, and came to Appleton from that city about a year ago. Survivors are his widow, two daughters Lorraine and Virginia, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gastrock, Philadelphia, three sisters, Mrs. Raymond Schiller, Mrs. George Day, and Mrs. Charles Fox, Philadelphia, and two brothers, Fred and Harold, Philadelphia.

Funeral services will be held at 8:30 Tuesday morning from Sacred Heart church and interment will be in St. Joseph cemetery. The body is to be taken from Brett Schneider's Undertaking parlors to the home Monday morning.

WIRE SERVICE NOT HAMPERED BY STORM

Only Damage Consists of Few Broken Telephone Poles Struck by Lightning

Railroad, telegraph, and telephone service here was not seriously impaired by the severe electrical storms and heavy rains prevailing Thursday night and Friday. A little difficulty was experienced by the Postal Telegraph company in sending messages, but the defects were soon remedied. Heavy rains soaked several wire lines and cable connections between Chicago, Ill., and Escanaba, Mich., and it took the operators considerable time to send and receive messages, according to Byron Serogy, local Postal telegraph operator.

Railroad service north of Chicago was not affected by the storms, according to W. B. Basing, local agent of the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad Co. Trains were on time and no damage was reported to rails or roadbeds.

A few telephone poles were damaged by lightning Thursday night, but service was not hampered, according to officials at the local Wisconsin Telephone exchange. Telegraph service was not affected, and equipment of the Western Union remained intact during the deluge, according to Walter Storch at the local office.

COMPLETE PAVING ON WISCONSIN-AVE FRIDAY

Laying of pavement on E. Wisconsin-ave was completed Friday between rainstorms, according to officials of the F. P. Coughlin company, Chicago. A stretch of about one block on the south side of the street had to be laid to complete the job. However, the street will not be thrown open to traffic for another two weeks. Wisconsin-ave now is paved from N. Richmond-st. to N. Meade-st. The construction company now will start work on the S. Summit paving.

HEAVY RAINFALL IN STEVENS POINT REGION

Stevens Point — (AP) — The flood gates were opened here Friday night when the Wisconsin river was seven feet above normal. A total of 2.26 inches of rain fell here in 15 hours. During the past week five and one-half inches of rain was reported.

34 INJURED, 15 MISSING IN WRECKAGE

Expect Death Toll to Mount — Comb Debris for Bodies and Survivors

SET LOSS AT $5,000,000

Troopers and Legionnaires Patrol Area as Workers Search Ruins

Rockford, Ill. — (AP) — A tornado which Friday afternoon mowed a narrow swath through the Rockford industrial section and the near-by countryside Saturday had taken a known toll of seven lives with an estimated damage of $5,000,000.

Fifteen persons out of more than one hundred employed in the factories bowled over still were missing and 34 were in hospitals seriously hurt while others less seriously injured had been removed to their homes.

MAY BE IN DEBRIS
Those missing are believed to be buried under tons of debris of two furniture factories in the path of the storm and their names were singled out by checking the payroll lists of the plants with the list of survivors. A possibility that some of the missing still may be alive in their pieces of wreckage developed early Saturday.

Rescuers, who were playing huge searchlights on the demolished plant, ordered the hundreds of spectators, among them scores of relatives of the missing workmen, to remain silent while they scouted inquiries into the debris. Some of the rescue workers said they heard faint cries in reply.

The storm was another of the midwestern tornados which already have taken a dozen lives in Nebraska and South Dakota this week. It dropped out of black skies into Rockford late Friday.

During the night reports were frequent that additional bodies had been seen in wreckage, but darkness prevented more than a cursory search.

THREE MILE RADIUS
The tornado struck along a three-mile strip demolishing two factories in which several hundred men were at work and destroying many homes.

The known dead were: Ernest Commusier, 16; Bernard Commusier, 14; Virgil Commusier, 17; Tony Martinkas, 50, Spring Valley, Ill.; George Fagerberg, 51; John Brunski, 44; Swan Swenson, 40.

The Commusier boys were struck by the huriling roof of a garage as they ran before the storm. Only Virgil escaped instant death. He died in a hospital of his injuries.

Martinkas was found dead in a chicken coop he was repairing. Fagerberg and Brunski were victims of the wreckage at Chair Factory "B" of the Rockford Chair and Furniture company.

American Legionnaires and Illinois National Guardsmen patrolled the storm area with loaded rifles during the night and early Saturday as relief workers moved forward against the debris.

Four factories, Elco Tool company, Union Furniture company, Chair Factory "B," and the Mechanics Machine company, were among the larger structures demolished, while numerous smaller factories and homes raised the estimated damage total to more than $5,000,000.

FUNNEL SHAPED CLOUD
The twister, described as a monstrous funnel-shaped cloud that lifted and swooped as it progressed, entered the southwest limits of the city, moving a path from 50 to 300 feet wide on its whirl through the city to the Grand highway.

The tornado first hit the factory section where Chair Factory "B" is located. The fourth floor of the structure was swept off and the walls of the building bulged out by the terrific wind that moved the entire building some 30 feet, the west portion falling over the dry kiln structure. The payroll for Chair Factory "B" contained 112 names.

It is believed more than 50 of these men escaped when the tornado first struck, but it is not known how many more were able to get out of the building, where power lines and tottering walls made rescue work extremely precarious during the night.

Two hundred firemen, policemen, deputy sheriffs and highway police from Pelee, Wis., Freeport, Dixon and Polkville, Ill., worked through the night in the ruins of Chair Factory "B." Searchlights were used, but the condition of the structure precluded any organized relief work. Hospitals were established at the scene of the disaster.

JUST MISSED SCHOOLS
The twister came within a block and a half of several grade schools in which were more than 1,000 children. Frantic mothers ran down the streets the storm had traversed looking for their children. Many blocks were untouched by the wind which lifted and then dropped in its journey.

Laying of pavement on E. Wisconsin-ave was completed Friday between rainstorms, according to officials of the F. P. Coughlin company, Chicago. A stretch of about one block on the south side of the street had to be laid to complete the job. However, the street will not be thrown open to traffic for another two weeks. Model Home Designed for Its Building Site

Take Advantage of Lot's Opportunities, Advice of Architect

When Earl F. Miller planned the Post-Crescent's Model Home, he planned it not only for intrinsic excellence embodying every superior feature of structure, style, and material; but for perfect adjustment to the lot on which it is located. The house was planned to take every advantage of its unique location and the irregular shape of the lot upon which it is situated. The Model Home, in itself, is not an independent unit. Its handsome exterior, its fireproof construction, its numerous convenient features make only half its personality. The other half is in the charm of its view, its trees, its spacious front yard, and the sunniness of its rooms.

It is not by accident that the breakfast room, dining room, and living room command unobstructed view over the river and the beautiful Fox river—that passes below. It is not by accident that no billboards or factory smoke mar the peaceful highway of the river, are visible through the windows of these rooms.

It was by planning, not by chance that the living side of the house was made the sunshine side of the house; that the front yard gives an even greater illusion of space than is really there.

As important as the composition of the house to those who planned it, was the utilization of every advantage the lot on E. Opechee-st. had to offer.

To too many builders, location of house in reference to the peculiarities of its lot does not loom as an important problem. But it is as important to fit a house to its lot as it is to fit a suit to its wearer. A house that looks good in the pages of a magazine may be an awkward misfit on a lot whose size or shape is not suited to the style of the house.

The Post-Crescent's Model Home, in reference to its lot is tailor made. The lot is 230 feet deep and is situated on a bluff overlooking the Fox river. It is an irregular rectangle, and narrow for its length. It fronts 79 feet off Opechee-st. and the lot runs back to Owassa-st. where it tapers to a width of fifty feet. The Model Home, too, is somewhat rectangular, wider where it fronts Opechee-st. and narrower at the rear where the garage which is joined to the kitchen looks out at Owassa-st.

The lines of the Model Home are in harmony with the lines of its site. Because Opechee-st. cuts the site which widens on it at an angle, the Post-Crescent home, too, is placed at an angle.

The house is placed well back on the lot so it appears at its best perspective from the street. A house placed too close to the street walk is less attractive than the one set farther back because it looms too big and cannot be appreciated in its entirety. For this reason, the Model Home, with a broad expanse of lawn before it, is not only displayed to its best advantage in respect to its architecture, but creates the effect of spacious grounds as setting.

From two sides of the house and from every room on these sides of the house an excellent view of the river is available. Although its windows do not look out on the Fox, the kitchen is not entirely neglected when it comes to a pleasant outlook. Through its windows a beautiful and pleasant view of beautiful gardens will be visible.

Many builders halfheartedly place their houses so they do not take full advantage of the views they might command. Often, to but slightly change the angle at which a house is placed means to greatly increase the desirability of its outlook. Planning a house with reference to its own view and that of the neighbors is fully as important as planning its wood trim or ornamental plaster. The latter you can merely take advantage of the beauty that is already there.

How many builders enlist the sun as a scientific warmer and ubiquitous cheer spreader for the house? It may sound far fetched to say the planners of the Model Home are using the sun for these purposes but the truth is that his whole day's itinerary is to be utilized by the Post-Crescent Home.

This is the way Architect Miller reasoned when he planned the house: The rooms that are used in the morning are the breakfast room and the kitchen. These rooms should be situated to get the morning sun. Therefore kitchen and breakfast room were placed on the south east side of the house.

The rooms that are used in the afternoon are the living room and sun room. The most desirable part of the house when it comes to sunniness is the south and west frontage which gets the afternoon sun. Therefore, the living room and sun room were placed on the south west part of the house.

The least desirable part of the house in respect to sunniness is the north and west. The room that is used mostly at night is the library; therefore the library was placed on the north part of the house. The hall, also, is located in this section.

The room that has the least necessity, of course, for sunshine is the garage. So it is built on the north side. The garage was planned to break the force of the cold winds which come from the north-west in the winter.

Before excavation was started, the Post-Crescent lot on Opechee was a veritable wilderness of huge oaks. It was the aim of the builders to save as many of the trees as possible and their pride that only three had to be removed to make place for the house. The oaks surround the house. A number tower in the front yard and at the sides of the house, and they are plentiful on the grounds of the rear.

The trees, as a matter of fact, to the home which is situated to take full advantage of the ample shade they

FIRST FLOOR OF MODEL HOME WILL BE OF CONCRETE

False Floor Is Built to Support Concrete for Two Weeks After Pouring

Whether the finished product is to be a poem, a dress, or a concrete floor, the underlying principle, if perfection would be attained, is careful craftsmanship. Unless the framework for any of these is meticulous, the final creation can not be good.

Before the first floor of the Post-Crescent Model Home was declared ready for the pouring of the concrete, elaborate preparations were made, and directed by John Dryer, Milwaukee, state superintendent of the Concrete Engineering Co. An interesting chapter in the story of the Model Home is this episode of its first floor.

The most important thing was to lay the temporary false floor over which the concrete could be poured and which would support the concrete for the two weeks which must elapse before it will thoroughly harden.

Steel supporting props, or shores as they are technically called, extend from the cellar floor to the ceiling or under part of the first floor. This first floor is covered with row of Meyer steelforms for forming the concrete floor. Narrow aisles, eight inches deep bound each form. Long steel joist rods lie in these aisles. Over the forms wire netting is stretched.

That is the appearance of the temporary floor. Here are the reasons for each bit of it apparatus: The concrete to a thickness of two inches, is spread over the forms and into the eight inch deep aisles. The forms support the floor until it "sets." When the concrete is sufficiently hard the props in the cellar are removed and the pans simply fall to the basement floor, leaving a concrete first floor two inches thick and supported by concrete joists ten inches thick. These joists are simply the aisles between the forms filled with concrete and doubly reinforced by steel joist rods. The rods and the netting remain in the concrete and help to strengthen and hold it in place.

It is possible to spread the concrete at just the right thickness because the entire first floor is outlined by a wood frame that stands as high as the finished floor. The concrete is spread so it is level with the top of the frame.

Concrete floors will endow the Model Home with a number of practical as well as luxurious advantages. They make the home fire safe, impervious to rats, mice, and other purveyors of disease, making it as sanitary as it is fire resisting. Concrete floors tend to prevent either the admission or accumulation of things dangerous to health, many of which find protected habitat in the recesses of the ordinary house.

The low heat conductivity of concrete which makes it such an admirable fire resisting material also retards the entrance of cold. When properly made, it is devoid of cracks and imperfect joinings. Settlement of walls, so common in buildings of wood, is no part to occur. A concrete house is cool in summer and warm in winter.

In the matter of durability, concrete, like the Haydite building units, California stucco, and plaster in the Post-Crescent home, improves with age. Its known life runs into hundreds of years. Wood shrinks, warps, burns and decays. Stone and brick walls fall apart and are disrupted through the action of frost and temperature changes. But concrete is improved both in quality and appearance by exposure to the weather.

Concrete possesses marked sound proof qualities. When concrete is used throughout a dwelling there results a minimum of sound transmission, insuring the quiet and repose so essential to the ideal home. Allied to this is the exceedingly desirable attribute of rigidity which in turn means non vibrating floors. The fireproof qualities of concrete, briefly mentioned above, are worthy of further comment. It would be difficult to plan and construct a house that would ignite quicker or burn faster and the common type of dwelling. Every architect and build-offer. Even the walks are plotted to wind about the oaks and to make cool paths for those who stroll beneath the high leaves.

Another factor that was taken into careful consideration is the driveway. The driveway does not cut the front lawn but curves from the garage to the rear to Owassa-st. This leaves the front grounds free for landscaping and also provides easy access from the house to the garage and the street.

How to Reach the Post-Crescent Home
The Post-Crescent's Model Home is located on E. Opechee-st. Autoists can reach the property by turning to the right off E. Pacific-st. at the point where Highway 41 turns to the left. The lot is a block south of the corner of E. Pacific and N. Lemanah-st. or follow the rear line to entrance of Riverside Cemetery, turning right on Owassa St. The rear entrance to lot is one block south on Owassa St.

BASEMENT, FIRST FLOOR OF HOUSE ALMOST FINISHED

Workmen Ready Now to Pour Concrete on Ground Floor of Model Home

Despite the rains of the past week which considerably hindered progress, the basement and frame work for the first floor of the Post-Crescent Model Home on E. Opechee-st. are practically completed and workmen are now ready to pour the concrete first floor.

A life size floor plan in steel and wood and brick zig-zags its carefully irregular outline on the Post-Crescent lot. A boundary of wood frame outlines the shape of the Model Home.

Untroubled by the formality of doors or walls, one passes the dining and living rooms. In the latter the brick frame of a fireplace and a stump of a chimney are already completed. In the library, too, the brick structure of another fireplace and its chimney look with placid security at the leaves which are already turning red and waving in the cool September wind.

Conduits for the complete wiring system being installed by Art and Killoran have already been laid on the first floor. The Model Home will be wired under the Red Seal plan, making it completely wired from attic to basement and providing plenty of convenience outlets so lamps, electric iron, chafing dishes, radio loud speakers and electric heaters can be connected from most any point in the house. When concrete is poured over the floor, the conduits will be completely and permanently hidden.

Except for the floor and finish the basement is well on the way to completion. The floor can not be laid until the plumbing is completed. The block work, however, is done and the laundry, boiler room and recreation room partitioned. The fireplace in the recreation room is completed except for the ornamental design.

Cellar steps have long had a habit of being steep, narrow and perilous, but the frame of the cellar steps of the Post-Crescent home indicate this basement-stairway will be broad and shallow.

Even though rain retarded the laying of the first floor framework, actual construction on the Model Home was hastened by about twelve days by the method employed in excavating for the basement. More time than was lost in construction was saved in excavation.

For an average house, the job of excavating with hand labor takes approximately two weeks and two teams, requiring a crew of ten or twelve men. The site for the Post-Crescent Model Home was excavated in sixteen hours with an Erie Gas-air shovel operated by one man.

The power excavator run by a gasoline engine and belonging to the Greunke Grading Co. has scoured an excavation time and saved it for the plaster-woodwork delay.

This Erie gas-air shovel has other advantages besides time economy. It cuts the price of excavation. It is superior to the old steam shovel in cleanliness. For the latter, coal and water had to be lugged over neighbor's lawns, soot and coal dust sifted on the neighbor's curbside. The Erie shovel works with gasoline and compressed air, an advantage over the old steam shovel which gave off black smoke.

The shovel in operation, looks like a giant hand. Palm straight, fingers pointing downward it presses into the ground, scoops up a handful, slowly closing around it, until the dirt is lifted high enough to be hurled to the truck or wagon by sudden opening motion of the hand.

Two hundred and twenty-five loads of dirt were dug from the Model Home site. There are three cubic yards in a load which weighs about four and a half tons. Much of the dirt scooped from the foundation will be used for filling and grading the lawn on the site.

The packing industry in which they say, even the squeal of a pig is utilized, has nothing on the excavating business. Clay dug from foundations is not dumped. It is sold—and the demand is big—for filling; or for raising low lots. The black dirt is saved and used for lawns.

Several precautions have been taken to keep the cellar of the Model Home dry. Drain tiles have been laid below the floor level, and covered with cinders, while the joints are covered with tar paper. The outside walls are painted with tar from the footing to the grade line.

SOCIETY

BOARD DISCUSSES
SEWER AND PAVING
PROJECTS IN CITY

Hear Complaints from Many Parts of Neenah on Defective Sewers

Neenah—Sewer and paving problems were discussed Friday evening at a special meeting of the board of public works at the city hall. Chief among the sewer questions was the altering of the present sewer in the rear of the Valley Inn Buick and Neenah theatre building, which has been a source of damage to the property owners since its installation, especially to the Neenah bowling alleys which are located in the basement of the Buick company building.

Efforts had been made for the last several months to remedy the damage but to no avail, so it was decided to locate the sewer there back to its original place on the city sanitary system until some solution could be worked out to relieve the property owners of the nuisance. Complaints registered from other parts of the city on defective and damaged sewers were considered and will be recommended for changing. In the paving program, Elm and Oak-sts. were considered for the coming year, with a possibility of changing the pavement on D. Wisconsin-ave. from Walnut-st. to the lake, from concrete to cement, and possibly making that part of the street leading to Riverside park, a boulevard with a grass plot in the center. This plan was considered in 1920 but was not carried out. The city will await the removal of the street car tracks which have been abandoned on that street by the Wisconsin Power and Light company, before taking action on improving it.

KIMBERLY COMMODORE OF NEENAH YACHT CLUB

Neenah—J. C. Kimberly has been elected commodore of the Neenah Yacht club for the ensuing year. E. E. Haskins was elected vice-commodore and Lyall Ellip, secretary. Woodrow Jensen was elected commodore of the Junior Nodaway Yacht club and Everett Thomson, secretary and treasurer. The election took place at a dinner at the Sign of the Fox. During the meeting, trophies won by the junior division were presented by W. L. Davis, Sr.

The first of a series of races by Oshkosh and Neenah yachts for the Gilbert, Felker, Davis and Sawyer cups, was sailed Friday afternoon over the Neenah course. The race was to have been sailed at Oshkosh but owing to the stiff wind which prevented the Neenah boats getting to the south end of the lake, the Oshkosh yacht was brought here. The race was won by Haywire of Oshkosh. The Oshkosh of Neenah was second. The two yachts were the only ones to finish on account of bad weather conditions.

The Shadow of Neenah did not finish and the Dad D, also of Neenah, broke a rudder and could not go on. This race was for the Gilbert cup. Another race was to be sailed Saturday afternoon. The race for the Felker cup must be sailed over the Oshkosh course and if weather conditions permit the Neenah yachts to get to Oshkosh the races will be sailed Monday afternoon for both the Sawyer and Felker cup.

SECOND SOFTBALL TITLE
GAME NEXT WEDNESDAY

Neenah—The second of the twin city championship softball games will be played Wednesday evening by the Menasha champs and the Neenah Paper company teams at Columbia park. The first game was won by Menasha 8 and 3 on the Menasha diamond. The series is the outcome of a challenge issued by the Neenah Paper company team, winners of the Neenah city playground championship.

TRAINING RULES ARE OUTLINED FOR SQUAD

Neenah—Strict training rules have been outlined to the high school football squad by its coach, Ole Jorgenson. He explained Friday evening that they must be strictly obeyed, or members must "get out." Two absences from field practice without a good excuse (from home or teacher, will result in expulsion from the team. The hour of 10 o'clock at night has been set as the dead line for "hanging around" town. So far only four men have been dropped from the squad. They were employed at home and could not keep up the nightly practice.

TWIN CITY FOLKS
GIVE FLOWERS TO THEIR HOSPITAL

Residents of Neenah and Menasha are invited to offer flowers for patients confined in the Clark hospital to be picked up by Appleton Post-Crescent Flower Cars beginning Saturday June 2, and every Saturday until the end of the flower season next fall. Persons who will have flowers for the hospital are invited to leave their names and addresses at Elvers Drug store, phone 24. If they live in Neenah, and at Frank Hoffmann's grocery, phone 212, if their residence is in Menasha. All calls must be made to these places before 8:00 on Saturday morning. It will be impossible for the flower cars to call for flowers if the calls are received after that hour.

FORD ANNOUNCES NEW FINANCE PLAN

Create Universal Credit Company to Act as Special Financial Medium

With the production of the new Ford car showing a steady increase each week, the most interesting recent development at Detroit was the announcement of the authorized Ford finance plans with the establishment of the principle of time payments on all Ford products.

The new Universal Credit company has been created to act as the specialized financial institution to provide a uniform and authorized time purchase plan throughout the United States. The Universal Credit company is Ford controlled and financed. Offices of the company have been established in the new Penobscot building in Detroit and two branches, Detroit and Kansas City, are open for business. As rapidly as possible a total of 35 branches will be established. Branches at New York, Boston, Chicago and Atlanta are organized and will commence doing business during September. These will be followed by the opening of regionally located offices in other principal cities from coast to coast.

The Universal Credit company plan of time purchase permits the owners of Ford cars to buy them at lowest possible financing cost commensurate with sound business practices.

Already the establishment of the Universal Credit company has aroused national interest on the part of Ford dealers and Ford purchasers. The Ford dealer welcomes the creation of the new company because it offers him for the first time a finance plan with the solid backing of the Ford Motor Company behind it. The Ford purchaser is interested because the plan gives him a distinct advantage in low cost and contemplates the purchase of sound insurance protection.

In the latter respect the joint interests of the purchaser and of the Ford dealer are protected. The plan includes the purchase by Universal Credit company of sound and adequate fire and theft insurance covering the purchaser, the dealer and the company. The purchaser receives a standard form of policy of insurance providing protection for one year. These policies are issued by the Insurance Company of New York, one of the largest in the world. The policies provide for settlement based on the actual cash value of the car at time of loss.

Enumerated among other advantages of the Universal Credit Company plan of time purchase is the fact that the company is not operated with the primary and sole purpose of profit, but is created for the sound financing of the Ford dealer and purchaser. The creation of the new company is expected to act as an added sales tool in the hands of the Ford dealer, who will thereby be able still further to carry on the announced Ford policy of passing on to the consumer every possible economy.

Catsten Tiedeman is manager of the Detroit Branch and E. K. Hilton is manager of the Kansas City Branch.

Universal Credit company announces the following appointments at the four new branches, which will commence to do business during September: E. F. Hovington, manager at Atlanta; W. B. Matson, manager at Chicago; C. L. Padden, Jr., manager at New York and George Harrison, manager at Boston.

SOLID TIRES ARE GOING OUT OF USE

Pneumatic Tires Becoming More Popular, Manufacturers Report

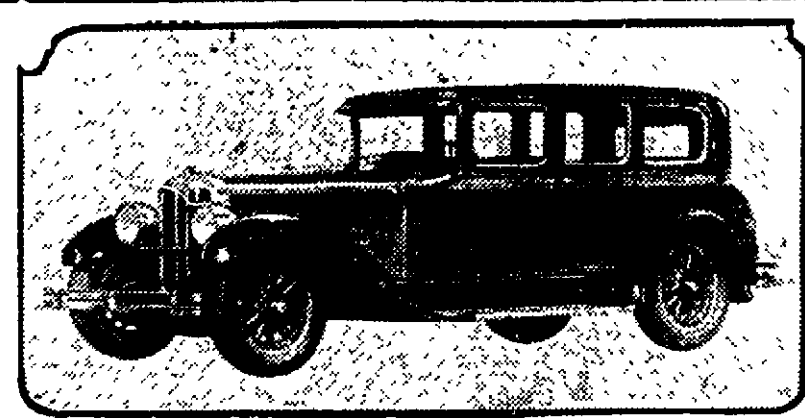

Use of solid and cushion tires on trucks is on the decline, with pneumatic tires supplanting them, according to tire manufacturers here.

This decline has been particularly rapid within the past seven years, and only 5.3 per cent of the estimated total truck production in 1928 will be on solid tires, according to a survey just completed by The Miller Rubber Company. In 1921 a total of 26.3 per cent of all trucks produced were users of solid tires.

In the same period there has been a large increase in the number of trucks using six inch tires and larger the amount in 1921 being 2.5 percent while in 1928 it is estimated that 11.3 percent of the total truck production will be on these large tires.

In the beginning practically all trucks used the solid type of tire. However, about ten years ago the possibilities of pneumatic tires for

CHEVROLET PASSES 5 MILLIONTH CAR

Record-breaking Production Is Response to Greatest Demand in Firm's History

Marking, for the second time within eight months, the passing of a millionth milestone, the Chevrolet Motor Company announced today that the five millionth Chevrolet was produced at the Flint, Mich., plant, Sept. 8. The four millionth car was built Jan. 11, following quickly on the spectacular nation-wide reception accorded the present "Bigger and Better" model.

The early arrival of the 5,000,000th car was in response to a continued demand that has kept Chevrolet plants on a day and night basis since the first of the year and has resulted in the setting of new monthly production records every month this year.

Production for the year promises to go well beyond the million mark and will show more than a 1,000 per cent increase over 1921 when 77,565 cars were built.

The epochal five millionth car was a standard coach and came off the line amid the cheers of a vast army of assembled mechanics who gathered momentarily to see the record making model glide off the line under its own power. Exacting schedule requirements did not permit of any ceremonies and a few seconds later the five millionth car became history, when number 5,000,001 was driven away.

This record-breaking production program was in response to the greatest demand in the company's history. During the first six months of this year 50 per cent of all automobiles sold in Chevrolet's price class were Chevrolets. This was an increase over 1927 when Chevrolet outdistanced all competitors by selling 40 per cent of all cars purchased in its price class.

Chevrolet's spectacular march to the 5,000,000 mark is shown in the following dates on which the various millionth cars were produced:

One millionth car	Feb. 27, 1923
Two millionth car	July 10, 1925
Three millionth car	Jan. 12, 1927
Four millionth car	Jan. 11, 1928
Five millionth car	Sept. 8, 1928

In 1927, when the Oakland Motor Car Company was organized, Pontiac, Mich., home of the company, was a sleepy village on an old Indian trail with about 12,000 residents. The population has increased fivefold since then and today strictly automobile products make up 97 per cent of the annual output of the town.

Oakland's service army of more than 15,000 men is now outfitted in a standard uniform.

Upwards of 16,000 men are employed at the Oakland-Pontiac factories and affiliated Fisher Body plants at Pontiac, Mich.

Advantages of pneumatics are maximum cushioning properties; greater traction; permit higher speed increase radius of truck operation; saving in truck maintenance; saving in gasoline and oil; saving to roads.

State laws regulating truck tire equipment, and vehicle tax also has played an important part in the rapid development and increasing use of pneumatic truck tires. In one state for instance, a law has been passed prohibiting the use of solid tires on state highways.

In addition to the increasing production of trucks for use with pneumatic tires many truck owners are changing over present solid types to pneumatics, and it is predicted that from 75 to 80 percent of those now running on solids eventually will be changed over to pneumatic tires.

WASHINGTON CAR OWNERS ANGRY AS CITY RIPS STREETS

Almost Impossible to Go Far Without Seeing Sign "Street Closed"

BY KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Washington—Probably this business of being a ward of the federal government rather than a full-fledged municipality enjoying certain sovereign rights has advantages as well as disadvantages.

Just at present, however, Washington's more than half a million permanent residents and the army of motorized tourists flowing constantly through its streets are taster—and cursing—the practical penalties attached to being budgeted on a fiscal year basis, like any government department.

It seems almost impossible to make your way in any direction for any distance without encountering a "street closed" sign and observing ahead striped and torn as by some titanic shell barrage. Direct routes are always difficult to find in a city gridironed by its numbered and lettered streets but with a separate system of diagonal avenues superimposed on that rectangular gridiron.

CIRCLES CONFUSING

The "circles" of Washington—they'd call 'em "circulars" in London for some reason known only to Londoners—are the hubs where the right angle streets and the diagonal avenues intersect. Any traveler of Washington experience will recall the difficulties he faced if he ever tried to pursue his way about on a first visit up some street-spoke of one of these highways wheels of the circle-hub, around that on a long sidewalk curve with intermediate neck risks at every crossing of the street.

Added to this normal traffic complication, beginning July 1 when the street work and sewer budget funds for the current fiscal year became available to the District of Columbia authorities, there is now such a street upheaval as makes it look as though Washington were being rebuilt, hastily, from the ground up. Even the street car companies have caught the fever. New funds for the huge federal building program have added to that confusion in certain sections. Wherever an appalled motor tourist turns he is faced by those enormous "detour" commands.

NEWER AND BIGGER CITY

Part of the trouble is due to the fact that Washington is growing up. Day by day it is taking on more and more the appearance of one of the world's great capitals. It is chiefly noticeable by the street widening campaign now several years in progress. Whole blocks of glorious old trees, gracing the sidewalks, before modest brick houses that sit far back off the property line behind flower and tree decked "front yards," have been sacrificed to the onward march of progress. Ten to twenty foot slashes from the wide sidewalks have been added to the vehicle roadways and mighty traffic thoroughfares resulted. The old, sleepy, peaceful look and habit of this huge village among the great commercial municipalities of no greater population is passing.

But as each project of street widening is finished, an army of gardeners tramps close on the heels of the steam-shovel and concrete-mixer crews. New tree plantings are in almost before the wreckage of the old has been hauled away.

NEW AUTO "LOCK"

London—A new device to thwart auto thieves has been introduced here. It consists of a movable rubber-plate holder, which can be locked so as to secure the plate in a vertical position; thus unauthorized driving is easily detected.

STRESS COURTESY AT AUTO FACTORY

Oakland Plant Installs New System to Eliminate Waits in Lobby

To expedite the work of commercial men calling on the Oakland Motor Car Company, of whom there are more than 2,000 a month (approximately one for every ten cars built), Charles O. Miller, supervisor of purchases, has installed a courtesy plan designed to eliminate so far as possible the annoying wait in the lobby.

Under this system the information clerk checks the time of arrival of all callers having business with members of the purchasing department, and the time each caller had to wait before seeing his particular party.

In the operation of the plan during the past few months, the average wait of each caller has been reduced to 3.16 minutes. The best day's average was 1.5 minutes. This is the more remarkable in view of the fact that from one hundred to two hundred men are interviewed every day by the Oakland buyers.

A poster in the lobby tells the aim of the courtesy plan, and a bulletin board hanging by the information desk shows the number of men interviewed the previous day and their average waiting time. Each buyer also has posted before him, over the signature of Mr. Miller, this constant reminder of the courtesy creed.

"It is our aim to have the Purchasing Department callers delayed as little as possible in seeking an interview. It is the duty of each buyer to see salesmen promptly. It is also duty to see that salesmen have the proper regard for other salesmen who may be waiting their turn."

"I wish this policy to be something more than a framed notice on the lobby wall. It is up to each buyer to see that this is the case." Every morning Mr. Miller sends the members of his department a record of the preceding day which shows the number of contacts each man made and the length of time he kept his callers waiting. The resultant intra-department rivalry has cut down the waiting average by considerable margin, and has won for Oakland "good will" a new significance in the mind of the caller at the factory.

PACKARD OFFERS "CUSTOM EIGHT"

Second New Car Is Longer and Provides Utmost in Luxurious Appointments

Closely following its announcement of an entirely new car, the Packard Standard Eight, the Packard Motor Car Company has just made public details of important changes in its former eight cylinder in line car, now known as the Packard Custom Eight. Both new cars are on display now in all parts of the country.

The second new car to be announced by Packard is considerably longer than the Standard Eight, having a wheel base of 119 inches and is provided with the utmost in luxurious appointments. It has a slightly larger motor with a bore of 3 1/2 inches and stroke of five inches. The engine actually develops more than 105 horsepower.

The most important changes in the car have to do with safety and comfort. The former Packard Eight had been christened the "Restful Car" by motorists, of both this country and Europe. The new Custom Eight is said to offer even greater ease for driver and passengers.

The Packard Custom Eight is offered in nine different body styles at prices ranging from $3,175 for the runabout to $5,550 for the sedan-limousine, F. O. B. Detroit.

While the company has continued to adhere to the fundamental Packard body lines there has been a striking improvement of the front end appearance. This has been brought about by a built-in radiator screen, lower radiator filler cap, jacket type lamps and the use of chromium instead of nickel plating.

Seat cushion contours, as in the Standard Eight, were designed scientifically to give the maximum of comfort. Deep cushion springs and down stuffed upholstery, coupled with free acting car springs and the new shock absorbers, Packard men declare, give the Custom Eight something new in motor car ease.

EXPEDITION PROVES MAN ONCE LIVED IN DESERT

London—(AP)—The Field Museum-Syrian Desert expedition from Chicago has returned after months in the heart of the desert reading in stone and flint the story of prehistoric man.

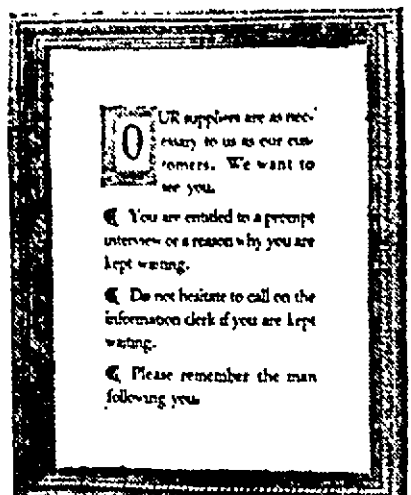

Under the direction of Henry Field, assisted by E. Schroeder of Oxford university, the expedition proved, through its finding of prehistoric implements, that in ancient days men lived in the center of the now barren habitable desert.

The archeologists believe that thousands of people were able to exist in the Syrian desert in ancient times because in those days there was much more water in the desert than now. One of the suggestions to explain the disappearance of the water was the depopulation of trees in many sections of the present desert.

The expedition covered thousands of miles of wilderness making topographical notes on the country, collecting flint implements chipped by man, and photographing and planning ruins which had not before been scientifically recorded.

Among the animals observed far out in the desert were the gazelle, hyena, fox, snakes and deadly scorpions.

CONTINUE HUDSON AUTOMOBILE SHOW

Motorists Receive Exhibit With Enthusiasm, Dealers Report

Hudson-Essex's little automobile show of its own—as the exhibit is described by Appleton Hudson Co., Hudson-Essex dealers—has been so enthusiastically received by motorists of this city that it will be continued, according to an announcement Friday.

The special show consists of a display of the Essex chassis and parts; of the performance possibilities and records of the Hudson-Six; and on all Hudson-Essex cars in new fall colors. All the past week scores of interested observers have looked into various features of the exhibit, Messrs. Adrians and Haen say.

"We have said in our advertising," he continued, "that Essex is built like a $3,000 car. That sounds like a broad statement, but when we show the vital units of Essex design it is plainly true. We have the big safety roller bearings for the wheels, the big steering mechanism, the propeller shaft and axles of most unusual size and strength, the roller tappets and the silent front-end chain in the motor, the enclosed and protected four-wheel brakes, the frame with five cross members—all features of the best quality cars, but all features which are not found in any other car of the price except Essex."

"Each and every one of these units is of vital interest to the car buyer. They are the points which would be first examined by an engineer who was called on to report on a car's quality. This exhibit is an education in itself insofar as it shows how Essex is built."

"Our Hudson show is as interesting—except that we are proving its design and construction by demonstration, rather than by a display of its parts. We are here to say and to prove that Hudson is the greatest road car on the market today. On the road it is doing things effortlessly which other cars can scarcely do at all."

"Hudson gasoline economy is 15 to 15 miles a gallon. We invite all the motor public to continue their interest this coming week."

MUCH RESEARCH IS BEHIND NEW AUTO

Chandler's Latest Model Is Result of Extensive Tests and Road Work

"Little does the average motorist realize, when he or she sees a new model motor car and likes it, what extensive research work the manufacturer of that car has exercised in bringing the particular model up to its high standard of beauty and efficiency," states Mr. L. D. Kurz, local Chandler distributor.

"Particularly true is this of the new '65' Sixes and Royal '75'. Eighty just announced by Chandler. In fact this applies to every model Chandler builds. Before any of the new models were introduced, a score of experimental engineers and mechanics kept everlastingly at testing, moving, tearing down, building up, changing this motor part and that, the thousandth part of an inch—all in order to increase the efficiency of Chandler power plants, so that Chandler owners may have the best brains of industry can offer."

"In the testing laboratories, the motors of the latest Chandlers were subjected to a bewildering variety of tests to check up on power, economy and endurance under various load capacities. Dynamometers, tachometers, pyrometers, R. P. M. counters, flowmeters—all sorts of delicately calibrated and intricate apparatus are used to eliminate theory from the performance of a motor car."

"In addition to its extensive laboratory research and experimental testing a fleet of test models of the new cars were also maintained by the Chandler organization to check up on the actual road conditions a car would undergo, in the hands of owners. These cars traveled thousands of miles every week, with experienced drivers at the wheel, in order to further prove the quality of the various units in the Chandler chassis."

"Test cars of standard models are frequently taken to the Indianapolis Speedway by Chandler experimental engineers, to be driven with the wide open throttle for hours, without a stop. After this punishing performance, the entire car is disassembled and each unit is examined minutely so that the exact amount of wear on all operating surfaces, such as bearings, etc., may be determined."

"While it might seem a waste to some people to actually put men to work to punish cars, it is by this practice that we are able to foresee and eliminate any weak spot in our product," Mr. Whitbeck mentioned.

"If automobiles were built in a haphazard manner, instead of a scrupulously exact manner, the average owner would be called upon to face bills of hundreds of dollars yearly. But since all possible wear and tear has been scientifically determined before a model goes into production, the buyer of any new Chandler may face the future confidently and know that his new car is as fine as modern engineering knowledge and science can make it."

Opera Star Buys New Buick

Miss Florence Easton, soprano with the Metropolitan Opera Company, is one of the many proud owners of the New Silver Anniversary Buick. In Chicago for the Ravinia Park opera season, Miss Easton viewed the new Buick's at the time of their recent introduction, and ordered one immediately, explaining "I was so captivated by its beauty I knew at once I must own one."

Chicago—One of the proudest owners of the new Silver Anniversary Buick is Miss Florence Easton, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who is here for the Ravinia Park Opera season. Though Miss Easton herself did not know she was in the market for an automobile when the new Buick came out, she capitulated instantly at sight of the new Buick line, and bought the four-door five-passenger close-coupled sedan.

"I had not intended to buy an automobile while in Chicago," said Miss Easton. "But when I saw the new Silver Anniversary Buick, my resolution left me. I was so captivated by Buick's new body lines and handsome colors that I knew at once I must own one. My beautiful new Buick has been a constant source of delight ever since I bought it."

"While it was the car's distinctive beauty that first made me want one, I soon learned that my sedan offered all the comfort and convenience imaginable, as well. The adjustable driver's seat and steering column, accommodated the car to my personal requirements perfectly. I have never driven a car which was so easy to operate. And the upholstery and fittings must, I think, have been chosen by a woman, and one of exceptionally fine artistic taste."

"When the season is over at Ravinia Park, I shall drive my new car to New York. Later, I hope to take it with me to Europe. I anticipate endless pleasure touring England and the Continent at the wheel of this perfect automobile."

apparent throughout that it was not built to a price.

"Ease of handling—whether in the congested city streets or along country roads—mark its performance. A smooth even flow of power responsive to every command makes it a personal car for the most critical driver. For riding comfort and safety in operation, nothing has been overlooked to make the New Senior a leader in its field."

"In announcing the car to the public, Dodge Brothers Corporation is confident of an enthusiastic public reaction to its quality and beauty that is clearly a step ahead of the latest trends in automotive design."

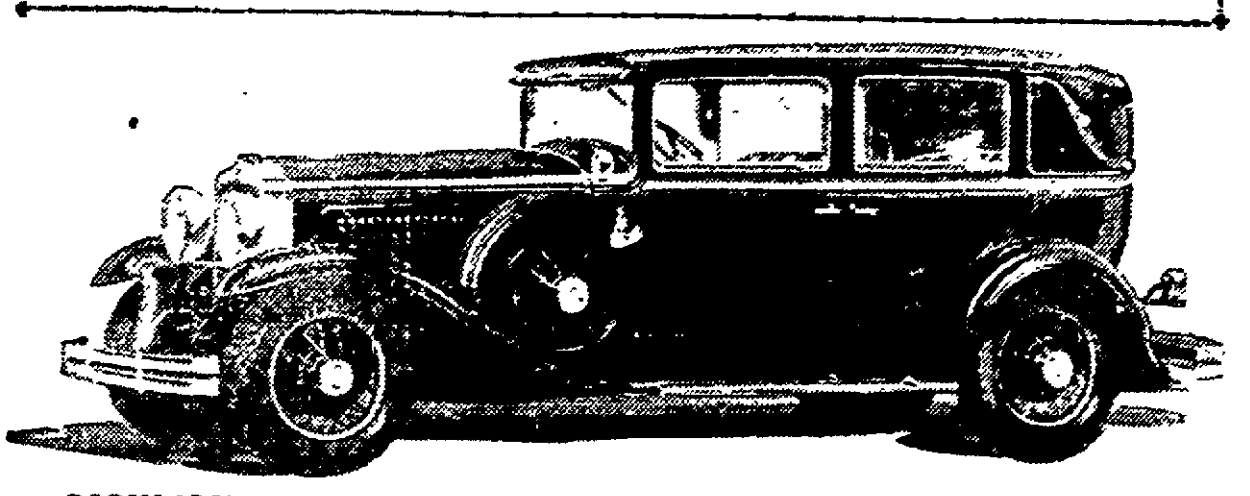

GIRLS, YOU MUSTN'T! London—The town council at Southend-on-Sea has been requested to stop a practice which has offended the susceptibilities of some of its members. It is said that girl bathers undress and dress themselves on the cliffs and on the beach without any attempt at privacy.

KOHLER CAMPAIGN COSTS

Our Super-Progressives want an investigation of state primary campaign expenditures. Our distinguished attorney-general seems to be the bell cow in this procedure. He, including the small coterie of politicians which poses as the Blaine-LaFollette ring, fears that Mr. Kohler has expended money to corrupt the morals of Wisconsin voters in securing his nomination for governor. Investigations and water-power baiting are the long suits of the Super-Progressives.

Of course neither Mr. Reynolds nor any member of his clique has evidence of wrongful spending of money by Mr. Kohler. He is not that type of citizen and would not undertake to buy his way into public office. Undoubtedly he spent some money and probably more than other candidates. He had to conduct his own campaign, single-handed, and that costs money. He did not have a political machine to furnish officeholders as speakers and otherwise spread his appeals for votes as did Mr. Beck.

The move for an investigation is palpably to discredit Mr. Kohler in the election by throwing out suspicion and by trying to make a mountain out of a molehill. It may conceal some scheme to bring out an independent candidate against Kohler. We do not believe there is a single Progressive, super or ordinary, who believes that Mr. Kohler spent a dollar dishonestly, while it is morally certain that an investigation will show that the amount of his expenditures was not unreasonable.

The request for a special session of the legislature is too absurd to be taken seriously. If Mr. Reynolds calls for authority and help to investigate, we would suggest the governor appoint one Herman Ekern. He ought to have a good idea what a fair expenditure would be to make a campaign for governor without a long retinue of officeholders to assist him. The investigation will doubtless turn out to be a fiasco, but it apparently must be undertaken to satisfy the chagrin of a political ring that was squarely and soundly beaten at the polls.

A MATCH FOR MAN?

Some time ago Glenna Collett remarked that no matter how much a woman golfer might practice she would always be at a disadvantage against a man of similar golf ranking. The disadvantage would be skirts. It would make a difference of a few strokes to have them blowing in the wind and interfering. Some day it would be interesting to dress Bobby Jones up in Highland costume and send him against Glenna, just to test the theory—or put Glenna in knickers.

Whether skirts interfere with tennis is unknown. But this week Miss Helen Wills made an interesting contribution to the dispute over man-woman-supremacy in sports by playing a dead-earnest court battle, at her very best, against Fritz Mercier, who stands fifteenth down in national tennis ranking, and who sank gallantly for the sake of the experiment, playing with all his might.

He defeated the greatest amateur woman tennis player in the world by two sets out of three, 6-3, 6-4, 4-6, but declared that if he had stayed at the baseline Miss Wills would have defeated him—or any man—by her accuracy and skill. Footwork close to the net, at which he was faster than Helen, saved him. It may be that his was about the only style of play capable of beating her and that other men, higher in the ranking, would have been defeated. But as matters stand the fifteenth best male tennis player in the land is a little bit better than the first female player. There are, of course, far more male than female players of the first rank, Helen Wills ranking all by herself today and dominating her field as completely as Gene Tunney did boxing. But this predominance of good male players is partly due to the greater number of men and boys taking up the game.

Given increasing participation of woman in tennis, it is quite possible a woman champion of both sexes may appear. Man's notion that he is inherently superior to woman in about everything but tating and baby-raising is sure to come in for an increasing number of pin pricks and dignity chasers. It is quite obvious; for example, that Miss Wills could defeat the male tennis champions of many American states today.

SMITH CONTROVERSY

Al Smith's latest controversy is with a couple of women gossipers. He has seen fit to take cognizance of a letter written by one so-called society leader to another in a distant city in which the statement is alleged to have been made that somebody said Smith was intoxicated at the Syracuse state fair. Knowledge of the letter came to the ears of a resident of Parkersburg, Va., who passed it on to Gov. Smith. On the basis of this information Mr. Smith has issued a detailed refutation of the charge, which he brands as a lie. Either Mr. Smith is unduly sensitive or he manifests, in our opinion, too great an eagerness to attack the alleged "whispering campaign" against him. Since he is unquestionably the beneficiary of any real calumny moral or over religious opposition to him, because the American people are in no mood to condone either, it would seem to be the part of his campaign organization to make as much of these methods as opportunity affords. Before the campaign is over the public will insist upon specific proof of organized efforts by Republicans to inject the religious issue or to inspire whispering innuendo. It will not care about individual manifestations of prejudice or wicked invention, for there is plenty of that on both sides.

The letter writing incident is the third or fourth time Gov. Smith has gone out of his way to deny charges affecting directly or indirectly his personal character and his relations with Tammany. Evidently he and Chairman Raskob believe this is good campaign tactics, but we think it can be overdone. The public has no interest in letter writing gossips or the silly chatter of society women. There were whispered accusations against Woodrow Wilson, particularly during the second campaign, but he took no notice of them. There were numerous whispered tales about Theodore Roosevelt, but he ignored them until they were given credence and publicity by a misguided newspaper publisher, when Mr. Roosevelt promptly haled the offender in court and nailed the lie to the mast.

If Mr. Smith is to occupy himself with all of the gossip and innuendo and slander he can unearth, he will have his hands full. A candidate for president of the United States ought to be too secure in his own knowledge of himself and in the confidence and respect of the country to pay attention to private scandal mongers. What the country outside of New York state would like to hear from Mr. Smith is a serious discussion of affairs of state and the real issues of the election. We think he would do better to let his lieutenants take care of the whispering campaign, if there is one, and address himself to major matters.

PLANE RIDES FOR DEAFNESS

There have been a number of stories printed recently about airplane rides as a cure for deafness. Hearing has been restored, it has been asserted, by precipitous descents from high altitudes in planes.

But now Major I. B. March, chief surgeon at Mitchell Field, L. I., comes out with the declaration that these "cures" are not only ineffective, but actually dangerous.

The sudden change in air pressure, he says, is often enough in itself to burst the eardrums. Add to this the fact that there is always a chance of a fatal accident when a plane is doing violent stunts, and the further fact that the fright induced in the patient by the sudden dips and swirls may have serious consequences, and you have a pretty strong list of objections.

A good physician, says Major March, can, in his own office, help a deaf person as much as any airplane ride.

Canada spends an estimated $6,000,000 every year for American publications and only $35,000 a year for British periodicals.

FEAR OF THE INMATE

In the last International Sanitary convention held in Paris in 1926, it was agreed by the sanitary representatives from every country of the civilized world that in case of an epidemic of smallpox, typhus, cholera or plague, letters, printed matter, books, newspapers, business documents, etc., shall not be subject to any sanitary measure. Only post parcels may be restricted if their contents include certain things not otherwise provided for in the articles of this international convention.

A very good idea of the present consensus of opinion of the world's sanitary authorities may be gained from the provisions of article 13 of the convention.

Section III. Measures at the ports and on the departure of vessels.

Article 13.

The competent authority shall be obliged to take effective measures—

1. To prevent the embarkation of persons showing the symptoms of plague, cholera, yellow fever, exanthematous typhus, or smallpox, and of persons in such relations with the sick as to render themselves liable to transmit the infection to these diseases.

2. In the case of plague, to prevent rats gaining access to ships.

3. In the case of cholera, to see that the drinking water and foodstuffs taken on board are wholesome, and that water taken in as ballast is disinfected if necessary.

4. In the case of yellow fever, to prevent mosquitoes from gaining access to ships.

5. In the case of exanthematous typhus, (exanthematous means spotted, the rash), to secure the delousing of all suspects before their embarkation.

6. In the case of smallpox, to subject to disinfection worn garments and rags before they are compressed.

It is remarkable that this international sanitary convention omits typhoid fever from consideration.

Note that the secret of preventing the spread of typhus is to prevent the migration of body lice, for these insects are the only known carriers of the disease.

Note that the precautions against the spread of plague are applied to the exclusion or the destruction of rats or their escape from the vessel in port. Plague is carried by fleas which infest rats, ground squirrels and sometimes man.

Note the precautions against polluted or contaminated water or food are directed in the prevention of the spread of cholera.

Note that mosquitoes (Stegomyia breed) are the carriers of yellow fever.

When it comes to the prevention of smallpox, the measures advised are disinfection of worn garments, bedding and rags, and of course (as provided in other articles of the convention) the isolation or "quarantining" of suspected or exposed persons for two weeks from date of arrival, together with vaccination.

The world is still in the dark in regard to the cause of smallpox. Of course it is an infection, but we do not know precisely how the infection is conveyed from one person to another. The ancient theory that it was carried in the air is no longer tenable. Even the theory that it is carried in or by such inanimate objects as letters, clothing, or old rags, is questionable, though this theory is evidently accepted by the sanitary authorities of the world. I strongly suspect the common house fly is the usual, if not the sole agent, in the spread of smallpox. The fly, from his first few days of life as a maggot, seems to be eminently suited to the role and I have yet to learn of an outbreak of smallpox in which his activities could be excluded in reason.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Oil the Morning

I am 5 feet 8 inches tall and weigh 115 pounds. I am now taking a vinegary glass of olive oil each morning before breakfast. Does smoking affect my weight? I am 19. My appetite is good. (M. E.)

Answer—The olive oil is all right, though I think half the quantity of cod liver oil would be more effective. It is better to take any oil an hour or two before the meal. One of your age should not use tobacco. Tobacco often does more harm than good. A glass of fresh (unpasteurized) milk and cream, half and half, mid-morning and mid-afternoon, would be much better than the olive oil. If certified milk is available, it pays to buy that.

HASKIN WRITES TODAY

ON—

HOOKING MAIL ORDER SHARKS

Washington, D. C. — Protecting

the public against the mail order

one of the duties of the Post Office

Department. Men, and women too,

with elastic consciences are constantly engaged in coaxing money out of the pockets and bank accounts of the unwary.

Writers of smoothly seductive and convincing

advertisements, men of ability and imagination,

enlist under the standard of the mail order

crook and victimize not only the credulous

and loose-fisted but also the conservative

investor and the so-called burnt child.

For this species of burnt children dread not the fire but seem eager to be scorched again and again.

Indeed, it is well known to certain kinds of swindlers, notably sellers of fake oil stock, that sucker lists of those who have already bitten on blue sky promotions are more valuable than lists of the unexploited.

The dishonest promoter fully appreciates how well it pays to advertise.

He sends out sensational circulars by the half million knowing that some will believe his lying statements and part with their cash.

One of these brazen advertisements says: "If you throw this in the waste basket, you are throwing away the chance of a lifetime."

The very boldness of this man's assertions is on many. He even employed the transparent pretense of limiting each person's investment to $100, "so large numbers may share my prosperity."

The oil well he featured in his circulars did not belong to him. In fact it had gone dry and the drilling rig had been removed at the time he was offering fabulous fortunes for small investments.

This man added many a name to his sucker list but he is now in jail.

For a time there was a mushroom-like growth of firms offering to use, and bankrupt, sales goods to those who were persuaded they could start a second hand clothing-clothing or rummage sale business.

A Chicago concern asserted that $50 a day could be realized even by persons having no previous experience in such a business.

The circulars sent to the victims of this scheme were filthy rag, bar stuff, utterly useless, unsanitary, unwearable and, certainly unsalable.

Investigation developed the fact that the promoters bought this junk in the Chicago ghetto.

THE WORK-AT-HOME SCHEME

The work-at-home scheme is one well known to the Post Office Department. Its victims are poor hard-working women, housewives who hope to add a mite to the family income. Whether they are duped by offers of $20 to $30 a week sewing smocks at home or by an offer of $5 an hour addressing cards and copying names, the scheme is the same.

The promoter sells a cheap working outfit for several times its actual value and seldom if ever buys any work from his customers. Usually he has no market for the product he features.

To a poor and needy woman it seems splendidly simple to sew together a plain garment like a smock and get $20 to $30 a dozen for doing it at home without having to purchase materials. In reality she must pay in full for the materials only have her completed work rejected for some spurious reason.

In fact the promoter of this scheme could get no more than $11 or $12 a dozen wholesale for his smocks with a limited market, but he never bothers to get even that. He simply takes his large profit on the working outfit and rejects the finished work.

Persons falling for the card-addressing scheme pay a couple of dollars for an outfit which they could buy for a few cents at the local stationery stores. In addition they are furnished a circular, which is supposed to contain directions for making $5 an hour addressing cards. This may easily be done, they are informed, by clipping personal mentions in items from newspapers and addressing cards to the persons named in the items offering to forward the clippings for twenty-five cents. Many have testified to the futility and expense of this procedure.

The mail order crook overlooks nobody. He sells inferior chickens, cattle, dogs, and other animals as blooded and registered stock. He furnishes fake patent medicines absolutely and unqualifiedly guaranteed to cure anything from baldness to cancer boldly defying medical science to solve his worthless formula.

He advertises Florida land that never was on the map and unloads stock in hotels, amusement parks, and real estate developments that are in the wilderness remote from the haunts of men. He writes from abroad and solicits orders for alcoholic refreshments in tablet form.

From Canada he sends a confidential note: 12 quarts of real genuine Canadian rye delivered to your doorstep for $24. And he does deliver 12 quarts of rye grain. If you are too heavy he will just peat the fat off your nature's way without exercise or diet — just a fat-reducing soap. Thin people he will build right up with the same preparation.

SCHEMES ARE ENDLESS

If you are poor, the mail order crook will show you the way to riches with a hand-me-down astrological reading, copies of which are printed by the thousand and sent to everybody whether born under Cancer, Pisces or Taurus. It is all the same to him, though he probably prefers Taurus. If your eyesight is bad, he will restore it almost by magic and one individual protested to all the world that he could grow new eyes in the blind while another affirmed he could not only cure the sick but also settle all domestic difficulties by his occult power — if you paid the fee. Another insisted that if you were short he could show you how to grow tall. Those who took the course made no permanent increase in height.

Another self-designated professor without scientific training concluded that anemia is caused by intestinal parasites which, by all means, should be removed. To accomplish this noble purpose he sold finely ground granite rock grist which is much the same as powdered glass. Taking a tablespoonful at a time the patient was supposed to grind up the naughty parasites in his tummy and so grow well and strong. Many, no doubt, killed themselves with this preparation.

Nor are the religious neglected. An ingenious fellow hit upon the scheme of mailing C. O. D. parcel post packages to persons whose names were in the death notices. Each of these packages contained a $150 Bible but the C. O. D. charge was $5 plus postage. Usually the sorrowing relatives accepted and paid for the package supposing the deceased had ordered the Bible. Some relatives happened to know better and the ingenious gentleman fell into the toils of the law.

With these and many another cleverly planned business, dishonest in concept and operation, the Post Office Department has to cope. Against the persons using the mails to defraud, the Postmaster General issues fraud orders. These orders cause the return to sender of all mail addressed to the persons and concerns named in the orders. Moreover the returned letters are stamped "Fraudulent."

No money orders may be certified in favor of those against whom fraud orders have been issued.

See-Sawing On Broadway

By Gilbert Swan.

New York —Mid-September find Manhattan in its most feverish mood.

It is then that a vast percentage of New Yorkers pull up stakes and move. It is then that any enterprising ice man with a pushcart or wheelbarrow can retire on the interest of his bonanza times. It is then that moving vans work 24 hours a day, and even the old grocery wagon can afford to take on a new price scale and voice. At the other end of the telephone inform you that "they can't make any promises but we'll move you as soon as we get around to it."

Persons who have September in New York for more than one season make moving reservations months in advance. Long before the hallowed date most available means of transportation have been engaged.

For leases in New York run from October to October or September to September and New Yorkers, taken by and large, are a nomadic tribe. Such is the restlessness of the city that the dwellers yearn for a new pasture and they quickly of them. Only those who have moved and moved and moved finally accept the inevitability of the fairly comfortable.

The others keep the side-streets cluttered day and night while whole families turn out to carry bird cages, lamp shades and chairs. Kiddy-cars are pressed into service. . . . tired men and women plod by with bits of furniture dragging behind in the family baby buggy. . . . trunks pile along the sidewalks. . . . hectic last-minute vacationers rush in from the country to grab up the odds and ends in apartment bargains. . . . realtors hang out large signs. . . . landlords grow friendly and effusive with newlives, fresh from the hinterlands, cry out against the rent. . . . hurried rearrangements of family budgets are made to meet the extra $10 per month for a "perfectly darling place." . . . the streets present a kaleidoscope of the grotesque, the comic and the wistful. . . . It's one of Manhattan's most amusing annual shows.

Chronic golfers now play from morn to midnight.

Yes, and into the wee hours of the morning.

For "roof golf" is the latest togue among the addicts. Upon the roof of the Hotel Ogden, where one of the most elaborate roof courses is laid out, there are miniature reproductions of some of the most famous golf spots in the world — replicas of a famous tee, of a certain famous hazard, a lake and all the rest.

Midnight dazes for after-theater golfing are quite the thing now that the first cool fall breezes are being felt. Brilliant arc lights stream across the course. Gents in evening suits menace the trim tailoring of their shoulders. Some hurriedly redress into knicker and sweaters. Ladies in evening gowns and glistening jewels look out. Other gentlemen, who have stopped in the "whoopie parlors" for a few cocktails, grow boastful of their prowess, but find difficulty connecting with their "tee off."

And while on the subject of sports events, the boys at Sharp's Corners may be pleased to learn that they're tossing horseshoes now in one corner of Central Park.

Just around the corner from the Grand Central station a shoe store keeps open all night to accommodate those outgoers and incomers who may need a new pair of kicks. To my knowledge this is the only concern of its kind to run from dark to dawn. A bright young advertising man started it a couple of years ago as a stunt to attract attention to the store. But the crowds came in such numbers that it was found good business to keep it going.

A Candidate for Office in 1850

In that gallant age it was unthinkable that a man should ask for the suffrage of his fellow-citizens unless he was outfitted with sideburns and a silk hat, and he must have one speech at least that contained the phrase "From the rock-ribbed state of Maine to sunny shores of California."

Public Preference is an office every man seeks, now. Our men's furnishings are the choice of men who want good appearance and durability at a price that gives them more value for their dollars.

TWO FLOORS OF GOOD THINGS TO WEAR

"LOVE FOR TWO"

by Ruth Dewey Groves
1928 By N. E. A. Service, Inc.

THIS HAS HAPPENED
BETHEL LOU WARD carries ROD BRYER, who had previously been engaged to LILA MARSH. They spend an ideal honeymoon and the only shadow on the young bride's happiness is Lila's persistency in broadcasting to their friends that she was Rod's first love.

A splendid position is offered Rod by TOM FRASER of New York and Rod accepts. Anxious to make a good impression, they go to an expensive hotel until they can find an apartment. This seems to antagonize MOLLY FRASER, who urges Bertie Lou to buy more than she can afford. Rod wins some money from Tom at poker and, feeling under obligation to them, he recklessly invites the crowd to a night club. Lila arrives to visit Molly, who includes her in the party and enjoy Bertie Lou's discomfiture.

Bertie Lou unbraids Rod for the extravagance and they have their first quarrel. Strained relations continue until they receive money from home for their old furniture and then they are busy moving into a furnished house.

Lila surprises them by announcing her engagement to a rich MR. LOREE and she asks Bertie Lou to forget the things she has done to her and be friends. They go shopping for the trousseau which, Lila informs her, is being paid for by Mr. Loree.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIX

Bertie Lou awoke one winter morning with a headache. It was unusual for her these days to open her eyes when the alarm clock sounded its dreaded call and close them quickly on a flash of pain.

She was very tired. Rod had offered to get his own breakfast, or to go out for a cup of coffee at a restaurant, but Bertie Lou was sticking to her bargain. She had said, "when they moved into an apartment with higher rent than they could afford, that she would be very thrifty."

Time and again Rod had urged her to have a cleaning woman come in at least once a week and scrub for her. But that would be four dollars and the woman's carfare and lunch. And four dollars would buy tea for Lila and Molly.

Bertie Lou grimaced with pain as she lifted her head from the pillow. Rod was still asleep. She left the bed quietly and stole into the bathroom for an icy shower.

She seldom had this chance before breakfast as the usual order of their little household was for Rod to jump hurriedly into his slippers and dash for the bathroom while Bertie Lou dived into a morning dress and contented herself with a face bath. Or late Rod had overslept a few times and Bertie Lou had got a moment under the shower before she called him. It helped her head a little and dispelled her lassitude, at least for awhile. But the morning's housework brought it back. And by afternoon, when she went to a matinee, or tea, or bridge, she was often almost faint with fatigue.

She'd have been horrified, though, if anyone had told her that she needed more nourishing food. Rest, she recognized, would have been a blessing, but she was satisfied to go from an orange at breakfast time until dinner on the refreshments that were served at the social affairs she attended. And, more often than not, her dinner was too frugal to be properly nourishing.

For food and Bertie Lou had come to a queer pass. Living in a nice apartment, charmingly furnished, and, hobnobbing with wealthy people, nevertheless they were starved.

Bertie Lou was cutting and cutting on her household expenses. Drudging and slaving. Dressing Rod's clothes, washing all but the heaviest pieces of laundry, mending, cleaning and repairing until she actually despised the sight of her sewing basket.

Rod said it was insane. Bertie Lou said she didn't see what else they could do. Surely Tom would give him an increase in salary soon. He ought to be able to see how badly they needed it.

"But he doesn't see," Rod argued. "You always look like a million dollars, Bertie Lou. I can't go to him and ask for more money when you give him the impression of having spent my entire salary on clothes. And I forget that we throw him and Molly a small dinner here and there which makes my salary seem like a sweet sufficiency to him. You're sure turned out to be a good cook, honey. When there's anything to cook," he added with a wry smile.

And Bertie Lou had replied that they must keep on. It would be a waste of all their sacrifices to give up now and admit that they couldn't make the grade.

"What grade?" Rod had wanted to know. Then Bertie Lou would go over it again, patiently and hopelessly. Some day something would come from associating with the right people, she declared. And anyhow, he knew she couldn't cut away from Molly and Lila. Hadn't she tried hard enough when Lila and Cyrus came back from Florida? She'd refused and refused. But Lila had so much money to spend, it was a joke to her when Bertie Lou even thought of trying to repay the hospitality she insisted upon extending to her friend. For Bertie Lou and Lila were friends.

So Bertie Lou occasionally gave luncheons and bridge parties in her own small home and worked doggedly for two or three days in advance to prepare dainties and make favors that could not be sneered at. Not that Lila, or even Molly, was sneering. But Bertie Lou was of an independent nature. She must give it she received. Her entertaining was always successful.

She was popular with the people Lila introduced her to, the set Lila had fallen into after her marriage to Cyrus Loree. It amused and delighted them to go to Bertie Lou's apartment once in a while just to show her that they would even condescend to go to that length to have her come to them. They were not unpleasantly patronizing. Bertie Lou had no cause to complain of their attitude toward her.

What Rod deplored most was the night parties. He lost sleep. And spent too much money. No more wild parties flourished in such places as the Arabesque, naturally, but poker parties in which he neither lost nor won much, as he was able to prove to Bertie Lou after a few sittings, and bridge.

The real parties he tried to sidestep entirely, but he found it as difficult as Bertie Lou did to refuse Lila or Molly. They could keep away from affairs that the other people gave at night, and they did, because Rod flatly refused to obligate himself.

But it was different with the Lorees and the Frasers who appeared to consider themselves more than repaid for the entertainment they offered Rod and Bertie Lou when they were invited to dine with them.

For Molly was so unfortunate as to possess a very mediocre cook, while Lila was openly frank in her enjoyment of Bertie Lou's exquisite dishes as a welcome change from the culinary excellence of her own French chef.

Bertie Lou forced herself to the utmost of her skill and strength on these occasions. She took pride in the compliments of her guests.

On the other hand, Rod was not so smilingly courageous, nor hopeful of the ultimate benefits to be derived from living beyond their means, of begging the present for the sake of the future.

He grew dark-browed and quiet. Lines appeared like a network about his eyes. Anyone could see that he was deeply worried. Bertie Lou, brushing her hair with a few quick strokes, thought of it, and hesitated to arouse him. If she failed to do so he would be late. To be behind time at the office made him irritable. He said it showed a fellow was slipping.

She didn't want him to be cross this morning and start the day with a frown. Lila was having a party tonight, an important affair, to which they were invited.

Rod had not wanted to go. But Bertie Lou insisted. Wanted him to meet some of the people Lila had said would be there. Perhaps he could make new contacts.

Bertie Lou was beginning to realize that Rod had no future with Tom. After all, Tom's firm was a small one—nothing to be compared with those immense organizations that take possession of colossal buildings in which to do business. Perhaps Rod would get on faster if he made a change, or took a step forward.

Bertie Lou was not alone in noting Rod's worried state and depression. Lila, too, observed it—observed that it was deepening. She guessed, easily enough, what was at the bottom of it. The days of her own limited resources had not so far back that she had forgotten how painfully annoying it was to feel the money pinch.

And Bertie Lou, in an impulsive moment, had confided in her that Rod had borrowed money from his father. She did not volunteer to state that he had been forced to resort to this step to pay off some of their most pressing debts—the accounts at Stacey's and the lapsed payments on the furniture.

But Lila could read between the lines. Not so with Molly. She did not even bother to wonder how Bertie Lou and Rod managed on his salary. Perhaps she, like Tom, assumed the young couple had other resources. Lila, on the other hand, made it a point to draw Bertie Lou out on the subject at every opportunity.

When Rod and Bertie Lou arrived at the Lorees the butler took Rod's things while Bertie Lou went upstairs to doff her wraps. Instead of entering the drawing room Rod waited for her in the hall.

A few guests had already arrived ahead of them and had gone either upstairs or to join Cyrus in the library. Lila did not like to have things served in the drawing-room since the night her satinwood furniture had been freely ring-marked. She was in the drawing-room now, seeing if Wilkins had lighted the proper lamps.

The door to the hall was closed. Lila did not know that Rod was there alone until she came out to run upstairs.

For a silent moment she appraised him as he stood leaning dejectedly against the newel post. Then she moved over with a soft swift tread. Her beaded dress gave forth a faint tinkling sound. Rod looked up. She touched his arm, then rested both her hands on it.

"Anything for your thoughts," she said, a veiled infinity of tenderness in her low-pitched voice.

NOTICE THE FAIR STORE Will Be Closed Mon. Sept. 17

To remark and rearrange the balance of the stock for final clearance of all departments

Beginning Tuesday, Sept. 18th, we launch new merchandise prices that will be the biggest achievement in value giving that's ever happened in years. The thousands of people who participated in our Alteration Sale the first few weeks were simply amazed at the unsurpassed wonder-values—and as they shopped around their amazement and delight grew beyond all expression! We are continuing giving the same wonder-values during the remaining days of this great event—bargains—the like of which the people of Appleton have never witnessed—far less than wholesale prices prevail on thousands of dollars worth of desirable, seasonable merchandise. Hundreds of bargains were snapped up like hot cakes during the first part of this sale and hundreds of sensational bargains will be ready Tuesday—ready for your choosing during the remaining days of this sale and when these wonder-values are gone, we cannot duplicate them, for—We are closing out every dollar's worth of merchandise in the store—to the bare walls. We are forced to do this because the alterations and remodeling we have planned will cause so much dust, clutter and dirt that we must be out of the way before the actual work begins and we most certainly could not do any business while it was going on. So everything must go and if you attend this sale the few remaining days we will guarantee you the bargain thrill of a life-time.

The Boy Who Had Fads And His Mother

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

THEY say that nothing is wasted. Let us conduct a forum of a few short paragraphs and then take a vote.

We shall take the case of a boy who had fads.

He had a fad for dogs as a little boy. This was not unusual but the thing that was not so usual was his mother backing him in his notion that every stray dog should be brought home, fed, housed, bathed and given a new start in life. That is what she did.

Of course this was not the beginning of Dick's fads. He had gone through the ambitious stages of motorman, policeman, soldier, and aviator long before. He had had his uniforms, guns, flying machines, and what not.

Dick went to high school and fell madly in love with chemistry. One day, he came in without eyebrows, eye-lashes, and his hair missing as far back as his crown. He had manufactured gun-powder unbeknownst and blown himself up.

Ext. The explosive factory.

The next step in the seven ages was "writing."

He read and wrote and wrote and read. He went to college and flunked out because he insisted on writing bad papers.

This was serious. The sympathy at home was strained a bit at this puncture.

He wanted to join the marines. A bit of complication here. But he did and saw the world and had a bit of fighting.

But he had lost his enthusiasm for life. He had not. His experience had been a lodge-pole, but every urge had been carried through to a finish.

He was a man now with a man's thoughts, a man's purpose, a man's estate. He must settle down. He did. He got a job in a publishing house and worked like a horse.

He was informed. He knew about everything. There was a fine balance of values in his mind that made him invaluable to his employers.

He is now a member of the firm and going up. A more splendid specimen of manhood one seldom sees. His friends adore him. His family worships him.

Was it all an accident?

No, it was an all-wise mother.

FASCINATING WOMEN TOPIC OF NEW BOOK

Name the world's fascinating women! Right off the bat you'll mention Cleopatra, Helen of Troy, and then stop, just as, after naming Madame Curie, you stop when asked to list famous women of science. But a new book called "Fascinating Women, Sacred and Profane" swells the list with such names as The Empress Theodora, Madame de Pompadour, Lady Hamilton, Meta Harr, Parisina, Malatesta, Renee of France, Marie Felice Orsini, Saint Theresa, Sister Mariama, Ninon de Lenches, Liselotte of the Palatine, and a dozen others, most of whom most of us never heard of. Which makes one wonder just why Cleo and Helen so captivated the imagination of all time, whereas many just as charming and lovely ladies have not!

BREAKFAST — Peaches, cereal, cream, baked French toast, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON — Ham and veal timbales, creamed carrots, shredded cabbage, apple sauce, cookies, milk, tea.

DINNER — Vegetable plate, frozen cheese salad, fruit cup, milk, coffee.

HAM AND VEAL TIMBALES — One cup chopped veal and ham mixed, 1-3 cup stale bread crumbs, 3-4 cup milk, 2 teaspoons minced parsley, 2 eggs, salt and pepper. Melt butter, add bread crumbs and milk and cook five minutes, stirring constantly. Add meat, parsley and eggs slightly beaten. Season with salt and pepper, the amount of seasoning depending on the saltiness of the meat. Turn into buttered individual molds or custard cups, making cups not more than two-thirds full. Put cups into a pan of hot water, cover with buttered paper and bake 30 minutes in a hot oven. Turn out of molds onto a hot platter and serve.

PARIS STILL SEES RED IN WINTER STYLES

Paris (AP)—Clothes still have a decided tendency to be red. Worth is one of the names most conspicuously linked with red, but Patou also shows much of the searing shade, and nearly every collection has at least one bright red evening dress.

For sport sweaters and jersey ensemble costumes, dark red is extensively combined with beige or gray. The red, white and blue idea seems to be subdividing after a big summer popularity. Red cloth flowers on dark blue or black coats, suits and dresses, are almost the last vestige of the once general decorative posy.

American Women Too Fad Bound To Express Own Individuality

Three of the world's smartest women: (left to right) Ina Claire, Millicent Rogers Ramos, and Lilli Damita, according to a famous European artist, Count Reynaldo Luza (inset).

BY JULIA BLANSHARD

NEA Service Writer

NEW YORK—The American is the smartest looking woman in the world; the Parisian is the most interesting; the South American or the Russian is the most seductive.

Reynaldo Luza, one of Europe's noted fashion artists, gave this opinion from his observations sketching styles in Paris, Biarritz, on the Lido, in Vienna, London, New York and other smart points east and west.

Luza is Peruvian by birth, Parisian by adoption. His full name is Sount Luza de Luza. Having attended the most exclusive fashion shows, opera and theatre openings, races and social events, and being personally acquainted with the most famous of Parisian couturiers, Luza knows styles from every angle.

WANTS TO WEAR "LATEST" — The American woman's taste in clothes has developed tremendously in the past 10 years, according to Luza.

"But she still wants to look too much like the picture on a magazine cover. She is made-up like all other American women. She still wants to wear 'the latest' style, whether it becomes her personality or not.

"The Parisian, on the other hand, does not give much heed to the changing styles herself.

"She is apt to dress much in black, wear a piece of exquisite and appropriate jewelry, and adhere to a simplicity that emphasizes her charm. She knows the value of the quiet setting; her personality is thrown into relief as a gem against quiet velvet.

ALL SHOES ARE DIFFERENT — "In the American woman's wardrobe, if there are 200 pairs of shoes, each pair will be different. The Parisian will have hers made almost precisely alike, year after year.

"The American woman will experiment with the large hat, the small one, the beret, the cloche, or whatever is shown in the shop windows. The Parisian loves her small hat, she knows the charm of a woman's shapely head, she refuses to abandon the small hat unless she needs a brim or a certain angle to conceal some defect in her features, such as a large nose. The Parisian's entire costume expresses her own personality.

The South American woman, who is much in Paris has, in addition to the smartness of the American woman and the fascination of the Parisian, a certain charm that is the result of centuries of culture. She is tall, marvelously built, with a fine grace. Ease and luxury are her.

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS—

Men never will tell a rich girl whether she's the first one whose money they've ever loved.

inheritance. She has everything — chic, high culture, family, distinction, and the repose that comes from all these. She is complete."

THE RUSSIAN, TOO

"The Russian woman has this same 'something' that the South American possesses, according to Luza. "Age," he averred, "has not so much to do with it as one thinks. No woman's charm has crystallized before she is 30."

He mentioned certain women in different countries who are internationally known for their chic. Ina Claire, Mrs. Felix Doubleday, Millicent Rogers Ramos, and Mrs. George T. Brokaw headed the list of Americans. Lilli Damita, the new film star recently imported from Paris, is typically a Parisian. Lady Abby is a notable example of Russian charm, and Madame Gaynz, of South America.

HIS OPINION

Luza expressed his opinion on certain phases of current style as follows:

"Women's clothes have already reached the brevity limit—reached it last year. From now on there will be a gradual lengthening of skirts, the return of the train and petticoats are just around the corner. "Boysish lines will have disappeared in a few seasons.

"Bare legs will never be the accepted style for there is a charm about the gleam of silk that enhances even poorly shaped legs. Bare legs are not in keeping with the lure of today's silks and satins."

Household Hints

APRICOT FLAVOR — If you put a few apricots in with practically any fruit you are preparing now, they give a piquant flavor. Halved fresh apricots make delectable salad when filled with cream cheese.

CUCUMBER JELLY — A jelly salad flavored with chopped cucumbers is exceptionally good when chopped corn and pimento are added.

CORNEBEEF HASH — Add a few chopped apples to corned beef hash, if you like a piquant flavor. Apples are good too in lobster salad and in chicken salad.

THE TINYMITES

By Hal Cochran

READ THE STORY. THEN COLOR THE PICTURE

BEFORE the arch the Tinkles stood. "This wondrous place looks mighty good," said wait. "Someone will answer us. And, when they do, the walls too high to climb. I'd like to get inside, of course, but we must find some other source. To try and tunnel underneath, we'd have an awful time."

Just then wee Copy looked around behind the bunch and shortly found that they had lost the lion that had brought them to this place. He shouted, "Where's he gone? Who knows?" And Scouty answered, "There he goes. I guess he's tired of carrying us around. Just see him race."

The lion soon was out of sight, and shortly Copy Tinkymite said, "I know how we'll get in here. Come on, don't hesitate. The rest of you just follow me, 'cause I'm as brave as I can be. I'm not afraid of anyone. I'll just rap on the gate."

So, at the gate of Animal Land,

QUEEN BANDIT OF CHINESE IS IN LAW'S HANDS

Mukden (AP)—Wang-ku, "queen" of the bandit brigades of Manchuria, has been arrested. Five of her men assistants are also in jail. The capture of the woman chieftain who, as the leader of several hundred men, has been terrorizing the Huatai prefecture for months was dramatic. Wang-ku, big and strong, was taken by surprise in the middle of the night, and before being subdued she had knocked out four policemen and seven or eight soldiers with her bare fists. She attributes the loss of her freedom to the fact that she did not have any of her faithful clubs or guns close at hand at the moment. Wang-ku was brought to Mukden from Fanchiatun the other day in a compartment of the South Manchurian railway under heavy guard. The trial of the bandit leader and the five men is to be held here.

"I can't understand things at all," Faith said to Bob on the third evening after Crystal's accident as they sat on the vine-shaded side porch after dinner.

"Dr. Wright says that he can find no bodily injuries at all. He says her fainting spells must be from shock, but I just can't understand it. Cherry came over with Hope this afternoon and tiptoed in to see her just a minute and Crystal wouldn't let her go, but kept her talking for hours about the gay times she had before she was married."

"It worried me, but I was glad, too, for Cherry hadn't seemed to take much to poor Crystal before she liked her awfully now—says she just didn't understand her."

Bob smiled into the perfumed dusk and laid a brown hand over Faith's white one.

"Crystal may not be beautiful, but neither is she dumb," he said. Faith tilted her head, the better to see this man, her husband.

"Yes, yes, go on, dear," she laughed. "Explain."

"Too simple for explanation," Bob said. "Crystal wants to be a heart-breaker and was trying to fish in Cherry's bag of tricks, and Cherry was flattered by Crystal's interest."

"Who was it that said men didn't understand women?" inquired Faith. Moments of silence went by.

"Bob," said Faith softly through the darkness.

"Yes, dear," said Bob, pressing her hand a little.

"Bob, Cherry mentioned lunching with you the other day. You didn't tell me. Where did you go?"

Bob's hand left hers and fished for a cigarette. Faith, straining her eyes into the darkness, noticed that the hand shook a little.

"We went to Rose Inn and, as I recall, your dainty sister's not-so-dainty appetite called for chicken patties with buttered asparagus, raspberry moussee and iced chocolate. Even my warnings that she'd be wearing sizes 56 didn't deter her. And she, the wife of a dairy farmer who probably fairly wallows in thick cream at home!"

Faith said nothing. Bob said nothing, until:

"Faith, dear, don't start that again. We went through all that once. You learned, didn't you honey?"

Faith trembled in his arms, her fingers caressing the hair on his forehead, her tears on his cheek.

"Oh, Bob, I won't. I won't. Never let me start again like this."

"They always start as a spotlight picked them out on the porch, and George Pruitt swung in through the gate, a long pink box in his arms."

"Roses again," Faith murmured to Bob, "and he brought them last night, too."

"Hello, you two," called George. "How's the invalid?" he asked.

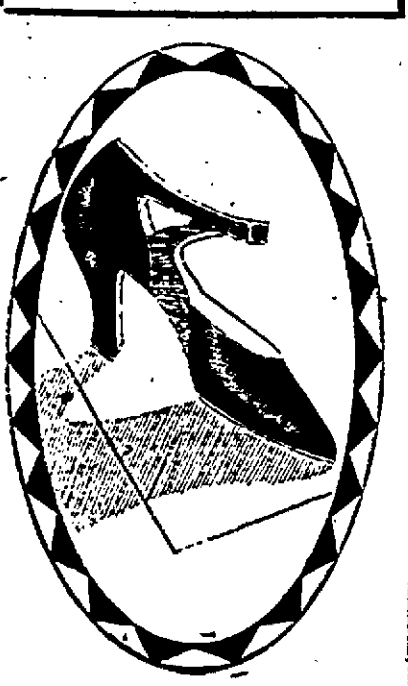

"She'll be worse now," said Bob as George passed into the house with his roses for Crystal.

Faith looked at Bob.

"So that's what you really think? If it's true we must stop it. She must go back to work. We don't want George Pruitt hurt by a silly girl's scheme."

CONSTRUCTION WORK IS HELD UP BY RAINS

Construction work on roads and industrial enterprises has been hampered for over a week because of the heavy rainfall, according to local contractors. Work on highway paving has been abandoned and in some sections of the state it will be hampered until the latter part of next week. The Garvey Construction company of Appleton expects to resume work on highway 10 in Waupaca on the first part of next week, providing weather conditions permit.

Grading on several projects has been impossible during the past week, according to the construction men. The road beds have been flooded and it will be some time before they dry enough to allow grading. The Wilson Construction company, which is building a 12 mile length of concrete road on highway 32 into Sheboygan expects to get back on the job by the middle of next week. Several cloud bursts in that territory rendered operations impossible.

ENROLLMENT AT PUBLIC SCHOOLS TOTAL 4,020

The final enrollment report of the public schools, presented by the education committee at the board of education meeting Friday night, showed a total enrollment of public schools at 4,020. This is approximately 120 more pupils than were enrolled at the same time last year.

With 98 pupils in the morning kindergarten at the Washington school, it was decided to engage Mrs. Edward Kotal, former kindergarten teacher, to teach half time. Because of crowded conditions at the Franklin school, it was deemed expedient to open a new first grade, with Miss Rose Colon, first grade teacher at the Columbus school last year, in charge of the new grade at the Franklin.

Attendance at the Oshkosh and Milwaukee teachers' conventions was left to the vote of the teachers in each school building. Miss Margaret Schneider was engaged as clerk at the Roosevelt junior high school. It also was recommended that three dozen folding chairs be purchased for the high school auditorium.

How To Play Bridge

BY Milton C. Work.

CONTRACT BRIDGE
We give today another Contract hand in which all the bidding is carried on by North and South, East and West passing whenever it is their turn to declare. The question is how North and South should bid their hands. Make up your mind before you read the explanation that follows. South is the Dealer, and the hands are:

THE BIDDING
South should bid one Club. It is quite true that many Contract players do not believe in bidding initially without greater strength, but experience has proven the advantage of light initial suit-bids provided the partner be dependable.

After South's Club and West's pass, North should bid three No Trumps. With even a minimum strength Club bid, three No Trumps, with the strength furnished by the North hand, is almost sure. To bid two No Trumps would not result in a game contract because, under those conditions, South, if opening with a minimum bid, should not bid three No Trumps.

When this hand actually was played, East led a Spade. West won with the King and returned the suit; Closed Hand (North) winning the Jack of Clubs and when it won, followed with the Ten. When East played a small Club, South covered with the Queen so as to be able to lead a third round of Clubs if the adverse Ace should be held up again.

It was vitally important to establish South's Clubs before his entry (Ace of Spades) was taken out, and this should be accomplished only if the adverse Clubs were divided 3-3. The chances were against such a division, but the risk of losing two Club tricks was worth taking as the play offered the only chance for contract and game.

Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of each week for about six weeks, Mr. Work will present a series of most interesting and instructive series of Auction Bridge queries. Start a contest in your family and with your friends on this special series. You will be rewarded with a greatly increasing knowledge of Auction Bridge and increased enjoyment from this great game. Tell your friends.

TOWNSDUCK HUNTERS ARE WARNED TO WATCH
GAME REGULATIONSWardens Will Be on Hand to Enforce Laws, Kaukauna
Sportsmen Are Told

Kaukauna.—With several hundred hunters awaiting the first rays of Sunday's sun so they can get in their first shot of the 1928 duck hunting season, some of the enthusiasm was dampened here Friday by a visit from Louis Jeske, Outagamie-co. game warden.

Thousands of wild ducks have been congregating in the rapids of the thousands island district of the Fox river east of the city and are attracting hunters to Kaukauna from all sections of the Fox river valley. This district, the same as last year, will be a mecca for the hunters Sunday morning.

Already there are many blinds lining the banks of the river and islands in the district where the ducks feed. While there are not as many ducks in this territory as last year, still there are enough to rouse the enthusiasm of sport lovers and shooters.

However Warden Jeske has thrown a little cold water on plans of the hunters and has caused some of the ardor which had been evident to be somewhat dampened. He announced that several deputy game wardens were to be assigned to work here Sunday to enforce the game laws which he claims were indiscriminately broken on the first day of the season last year.

Mr. Jeske said that last year many hunters had shot ducks from the open water, an action that was not in accordance with law, and he said if any such offenses were committed this year the offenders would be haled into court. He also said the deputy wardens would be there to enforce the game laws with duck-hunters.

Police Chief R. H. McCarty has promised to assist Warden Jeske in enforcing the laws and plans are completed for the work. Mr. Jeske said Chief McCarty would appoint the deputies who will work Sunday.

The stage for the opening of the season is all set and many hunters, who have not built blinds, are planning to go to the thousands island district about midnight Saturday in order to have a choice of the best hunting sites.

In addition to the hunting that will be done here many Kaukauna sportsmen will go to Fremont and other good hunting points on the Wolf river, Lake Winnebago and Little Lake, Butte des Morts.

TWO GRID MEN MAY BE OUT FOR YEAR

Candidates for High School Football Team Are Seized With Appendicitis

Kaukauna.—Old man jinx has appeared to dampen the outlook of Kaukauna high school football team. Two men who played with the team last year have developed cases of appendicitis and may be unable to play this fall. At the present time neither player is practicing. They are Myron Esler, who played at half back last year, and Richard Ferguson, who played end.

However, there is a wealth of material for Coach Elmer Ott to work with. Nine other letter men are back from last year. Each day about 35 men report for practice. It looks as if all positions will be adequately filled with the exception of a quarterback. Paul Casey, who is working at the position at present, is doing well, but his weight is against him.

The first game of the season will be played on the home field against Oconto Sept. 29. Last year the local high school team tied the strong Oconto team. The team started its first scrimmages Thursday afternoon. A hard scrimmage practice was held at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

TEAR UP TRACKS OF OLD INTERURBAN LINE

Kaukauna.—Workmen of the Wisconsin Power company started to rip up the old interurban tracks on the south end of Lawest and the corner of Wisconsin-ave Friday morning. The company came to remove the tracks after being asked to do so by the city. Concrete will be laid in place of the tracks.

The interurban tracks adjoining the Appleton company's tracks, and owned by the Wisconsin Public Service company of Green Bay, were removed last week. The removal of the tracks makes the road leveler and will relieve traffic to a certain extent on the corner of Lawest and Wisconsin-ave.

The tracks belonging to the two interurban lines that operated between Green Bay and Appleton and Kaukauna, which were discontinued this summer.

RAILROAD MAN MUST HAVE LEG AMPUTATED

Kaukauna.—Jerry Mainville 41 320 Dixon-st. who had his foot crushed under a Chicago and Northwestern Railroad train while braking at Combined Locks on May 21, will have his leg amputated at Chicago Tuesday morning. His foot was so badly bruised that it did not heal. The operation will be performed by Dr. W. E. Hopkins, chief surgeon of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway at St. Luke's hospital in Chicago. He will leave for Chicago Monday morning with his wife, and expects to remain there for about four weeks.

BROTHER GONE 45
YEARS RETURNS

Mrs. J. McMorrow Finds Relative in Her Home but Doesn't Recognize Him

Kaukauna.—Mrs. J. McMorrow received what was probably the greatest surprise in her life Thursday afternoon when she entered her home to find her long lost brother, Anton Wigger, who was thought dead and who she hadn't seen for 45 years. She didn't recognize him until he recounted events of their farm when he was 21 years old. He later went to northern Michigan.

When he arrived in Kaukauna Tuesday afternoon, he followed the Chicago and Northwestern railroad tracks to the place where he lived. He left a farm in the wilder, a log cabin home, parents and several small brothers and sisters. He returned to find another party on the farm, a new house, wilderness gone, parents and one brother dead, and the rest of the family grown.

After numerous inquiries he found his sister, Mrs. John Grode, living about four miles from the old home. Thursday afternoon he came into town and went to the home of his sister, Mrs. J. McMorrow. He also has a brother, John Wigger, who lives in Kaukauna. Anton Wigger had married and has a family in Michigan. He will visit in Kaukauna for two weeks. A family reunion and homecoming celebration will be held Sunday at the John Grode farm.

Through Anton, the other members of the family found that another brother, Henry, is also living in the northern part of Michigan and at the present time is suffering from a paralytic stroke. He left about a year after Anton left home.

LEGION SQUAD PLANNING
SCRIMMAGE ON SUNDAY

Kaukauna.—The first real scrimmage of the Legion squad will be held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Four nights a week the boys are practicing under the glare of two large search lights and on the past week they had to practice on a muddy wet field. About 35 men are working out regularly.

William Ashe coaches the squad. He is assisted by Harry McAndrews and H. Olin. Not content to stand on the side and tell the men how to play, Coach Ashe does a suit every night and shows them how to perform. The first game will be played against Shawano at that city on Sept. 29.

Sturgeon Bay, which was also a member of the Wisconsin State league, has withdrawn because it felt that it could not afford the guarantee money. It is probable that a new schedule will be worked out, or else there will be two open dates in the league schedule. The team is managed by Edward Rennie.

Sleuth Is Human In This Book

THE MAN WHO KILLED FORTESCUE, by John Stephen Strange. Doubleday, Doran and Company.

Every crime story must have a great detective. Van Dusen Ormsberry is the Sherlock Holmes of this novel. He is more human than a good many of the sleuths in popular mystery fiction, for he makes mistakes, is fooled, has to depend heavily on the wit and activity of others.

Among his helpers is Bill, office boy of the great lawyer, Mr. Speck. A boy detective in an important role in something new in recent crime stories, though Sherlock Holmes sometimes used street Arabs in London as helpers in a small way.

Anstruther, a novelist, is murdered on a New York bus. The indications are that the same man killed him who murdered Fortescue, the millionaire. So skillfully has he covered his tracks in both crimes that the talents of Ormsberry and his associates in the New York police are tested to the utmost before the criminal is brought to justice.

The story begins with a staggering load of improbabilities, but rapidly improves as it proceeds. It is the Crime Club book for August.

LAWRENCE EXPECTS BIGGER ATTENDANCE

All Rooms in College Dormitories Are Reserved, Officials Report

With every room occupied or reserved in its six dormitories, Lawrence college will start the academic year with a marked increase in enrollment. Last year neither Smith house, a dormitory for women, nor Brook, the men's dormitory, were completely filled, but this year not only these dormitories are filled but there is a waiting list at the other houses.

College officials begin with the resumption of classes Wednesday morning, Sept. 19. Upper classmen, who made out tentative programs last spring, are to complete their registration Tuesday. Although freshmen have been registering tentatively all during freshman week, their registration will not be completed until Monday or Tuesday next week when they meet their faculty advisers and arrange a permanent schedule.

Activities among the sorority women on the campus will begin with a tea Monday afternoon and subsequent tea dances, bridge parties, cottage parties and formal banquets which conclude the rushing period.

COMMISSION TELLS HOW TO ISSUE HUNT PERMITS

John E. Hantchel, county clerk, Friday received instructions from the state conservation commission, for issuing of hunting licenses. Mr. Hantchel will make copies of the instructions and send them to town, city and village clerks of the county, who are selling licenses.

The letter from the commission points out that every applicant for a license must properly explain because these affidavits are important means of checking on licenses in case a law is violated. Each applicant then receives a license and a hunting button and the commission cautions the clerks to instruct every hunter to wear this button on the outside of his coat while hunting.

In case either the license or the button is lost a hunter can secure a new one from the clerk on payment of 50 cents and the presentation of his duplicate application. Each hunter is entitled to one deer tag and in case this is lost another can be received for 50 cents by presenting his hunting license.

Girl Finds Danger In Fast Life

THE FOOLISH VIRGIN, by Kathleen Norris. Doubleday, Doran and Company.

The Foolish Virgin is Pamela Raleigh, a girl of Southern descent, resident in a California town and member of a dashing young set that smokes, drinks now and then, and stays out so late at night that Pamela's easy-going mother is shocked though she does nothing but warn her daughter of the danger. Pamela scoffs at the warnings.

Then the unexpected happens. Pamela dares to go to a distant roadhouse with Chester Hilliard in his car very late at night. They find the roadhouse abandoned, closed by the authorities. They start back to town and the car stops in the mountains, gasoline gone. They spend the night in a deserted ranch house. Next morning they walk to main road and are picked up by Dr. Broome, returning from a visit to a patient.

Dr. Broome and her friends are scandalized when they hear his story. Pamela finds that reckless youth sometimes pays—especially the girl. The best part of the book is the first eighty-five pages. After that Mrs. Norris plays tricks with Pamela; but all comes out happily, as usual.

NEW "Y" SECRETARY TO START WORK NEXT WEEK

O. W. Bauer, Chicago, newly appointed membership secretary of the Y. M. C. A., will arrive in Appleton Sunday and expects to take over his duties with the association Monday morning, according to G. F. Werner, general secretary.

Mr. Bauer is a graduate of the Y. M. C. A. college at Chicago and has been affiliated with the sales department of Sears Roebuck company at Chicago for the past three years. He also will promote young men's activities at the association.

guardian and abandoned children give rise to.

The contrast between the children, robbed of parenthood, their education neglected, their morals left at the caprice of hotel servants, even their health haphazardly guarded, and the Wheaters living a life of selfish pleasure at the fashionable resorts of Europe is powerfully presented; and it is a story-hearted reader who does not pity the children and despise the parents.

Mrs. Wharton's satire, however, in this novel is constantly tempered by good humor and sympathy. And she secures her effects rather by contrasts than by denunciation. It is the children, not the divorced parents, who hold the center of the stage.

There is a certain artificiality in the composition of some of the characters and in the shaping of the fortune of the children that makes it impossible to classify this novel with such classical masterpieces as "Ethan Frome."

On the other hand, readers who have disliked Edith Wharton's coldness and aristocratic suppression of feeling in some of her best known novels, will find her a warmth of sympathy, openly expressed, that will make them enjoy this story to the full.

EXPLAINS PURPOSE OF BROAD COLLEGE COURSE

"The reason for a broad beginning course is that it leaves the way open to change your mind," said President H. M. Wriston in his address. The Choice of a Vocation, which he delivered to the freshmen class at Lawrence Memorial chapel Friday morning.

"Change of ambition is part of the nature of life. If there is growth," continued Dr. Wriston, "there is a great tendency to choose on surface indications—if you are glib, be a lawyer; if you are solemn, be a minister; if you are a good student, be a teacher. However, there is need to go very much deeper. Don't be in a hurry about your choice but keep your mind on it. You may get a new idea during the four years."

Dr. Wriston concluded his address by saying that there was great need for analyzing one's adaptability for a chosen profession and considering seriously how long the enthusiasm for the vocation would last.

STAGE AND SCREEN

"THE SAWDUST PARADISE"

Esther Ralston's newest cinematic drama, "The Sawdust Paradise," which opened yesterday at Fischer's Appleton theatre, shows Paramount's glorious blonde in a new and altogether satisfying type of role.

As a dyed-in-the-wool ballyhoo girl with a cheap traveling street carnival, Miss Ralston plays a part that ranges between the light and broad comedy parts which have featured her previous starring roles and real drama.

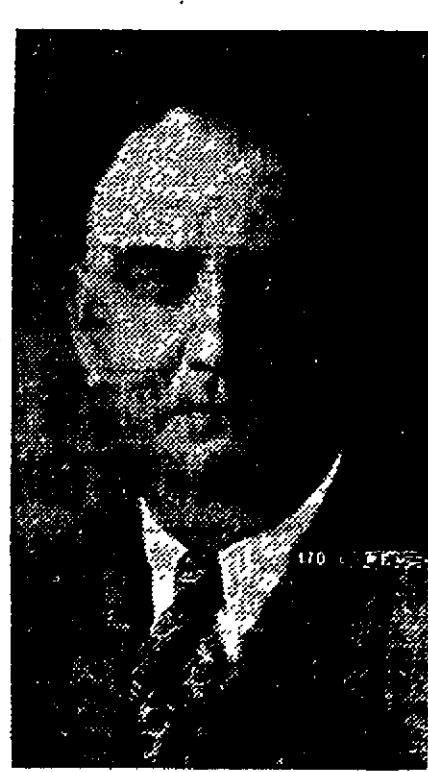

The serious moments of "The Sawdust Paradise," which is a miniature epic of its sort, bring forth vividly Miss Ralston's strength as a dramatic actress. It is reported that Paramount plans to give more emphasis to drama in the star's future pictures.

The story has a well knit plot. It concerns Esther, in spangles and pink tights as the ballyhoo and speller for the Six Diving Venuses; Reed Howes, her sweetheart who is a grifter operating one of the carnival's crooked concessions and Hobart Bosworth, a he-man evangelist whose tabernacle, across the street from the carnival, houses only a handful of persons nightly.

Reed Howes is excellent in his role which is similar to that of the prize fighter in Clara Bow's "Rough House Rosie." Hobart Bosworth is splendid as the evangelist, a character which he never lets veer from the human. Alan Roscoe and Mary Alden give characteristic strong performances.

Luther Reed, who directed "The Sawdust Paradise," has evidenced

"THE RIVER PIRATE"

Those who followed the colorful adventures of the modern Captain Kidd and his youthful lieutenant through the pages of the Saturday Evening Post story, "The River Pirate," by Charles Francis Cox, will be treated to a delightful entertainment at the Elite Theatre today and Sunday where the new Fox film version of this production will have its first screening. For it is safe to say that none of the host of readers of the daring deeds of Sallor Frink, Sandy, the "Shark," Detective Crisp and Marjorie, called see these colorful characters brought to life, when the opportunity was offered to them.

"The River Pirate," is splendid entertainment. It is the kind of picture that is advertised by those who see it to their friends. Victor McLaglen, in the role of Sallor Frink, surpasses his great characterization as Captain Frink in "What Price Glory." Lois Moran is delightful as Marjorie and Nick Stuart as Sandy. Earle Foxe as Shark and Donald Crisp as Detective Garton also give splendid performances.

This is a picture everyone should see, as it is sure to appeal to every type of theatre patron.

SET NEW RULE FOR PLAY ON MUNI COURSE

Golfers Must Have Set of Clubs Per Person or Stay Off

The municipal golf course will reopen as soon as the weather permits, according to attendants and until then players are asked to keep off the grounds. A few days ago several took advantage of an hour or two sunshine to go out and play despite the fact the greens still were wet from heavy rains.

A new rule will be enforced with the reopening of the course, according to members of the park board. During the last few weeks persons have been permitted to play despite the fact they did not have their own set of clubs. Hereafter a set of clubs per person will be a prerequisite to playing on the course.

LAWN TENNIS HEADS TABLE TILDEN BID

Request for Reinstatement as Amateur Put Off to Next Meeting

New York —(AP)—The "Black sheep" of tennis is still outside the fold. The executive committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association Friday night tabled Bill Tilden's application for reinstatement as an amateur. The next meeting of the committee is not scheduled until December and unless an unprecedented special meeting is called there is no possibility of Tilden's reinstatement before the end of the outdoor season.

The Philadelphia captain of the Davis cup team, became the center of the tennis storm when he was barred from participation in the last two rounds of the Davis cup matches on charges of violating the association's amateur rule by his newspaper articles on the Wimbledon championship in which he was a competitor. He was subsequently reinstated in time to play in the challenge round against France through the intervention of Myron T. Herrick, American ambassador to France.

The charges were reopened after Tilden's return to America and on Aug. 24 he was suspended from participation in any tournament under the jurisdiction of the U. S. L. T. A. on the same grounds. Tilden made a formal application to have this suspension withdrawn and at Friday night's meeting the 13 members present voted unanimously to defer action.

NOW LET'S HEAR THE PROS TELL ABOUT IT

Chicago—Old Gus H. Fan thinks it would be an interesting experiment to watch a good pro eleven against a nice college team and is willing to debate on either side as to the probable winner of such a game.

But there would be only one result to such a contest in the opinion of Alonzo A. Stager, Chicago grid coach. "A first rate college team would defeat the best pro teams," he says. "Pro teams are composed of great individual players, but they haven't the collective strength for the spirit or the will to win that the college boys have."

Benny Friedman, the former Michigan star, who is playing pro football with Detroit this season, thinks the pros would trim the college boys.

LOU GEHRIG BEST FIRST BASEMAN ON CONTENDING NINES

Sports Writer Attempts to Analyze Strength of Various Teams

BY HENRY L. FARRELL

Any method of analyzing the position by position strength of the two teams that may meet in the world series is difficult. An exercise of individual opinion and a certain amount of guessing are essential when only one player is being compared to one other rival player.

When as many as six or seven players have to be considered in trying to decide whether the American League team or the National League team will be stronger at any one position the task becomes the more difficult in the same ratio.

The pennant races in the two major leagues may extend to the very last day of the season and under the circumstances it may not be impetuous to indulge now in a little darning and patching comparisons with all the men who are on an eligible team.

For the sake of brevity and simplicity, the infielders, in this series, will be treated as individuals rather than as a group and the first basemen of the six clubs standing for the league championships will be taken up first.

GEHRIG FIRST CHOICE
Considering the general quality of their game, their disposition, experience and qualification for "monopoly playing" in a short series, the first basemen of the contending clubs are rated as follows:
Gehrig, New York Yankees, 1.
Bottomley, St. Louis Cards, 2.
Terry, New York Giants, 3 plus.
Orwoll, or Fox, Philadelphia Athletics, 3.

Grantham, Pittsburgh Pirates, 4.
Grimm, Chicago Cubs, 5.
This is a convenient way of saying that the American League will have the advantage on first base if the Yankees win the pennant. If the St. Louis Cardinals win the National League pennant Lou Gehrig would have only a slight advantage over Jim Bottomley.

Gehrig and Bottomley have been great first basemen during the season. Bottomley was not in the best of physical condition and he will not be a sound man if he gets into the series. Gehrig has batted in more runs and he handles throws better than any other first baseman.

FOX INEXPERIENCED
If the Cards should play the Athletics the Cards would have a better man on first than either Orwoll or Fox and if the Giants should get into the classic, Billy Terry ought to be better at that most important position than either one of the young Athletics because of his greater experience. Fox is a brilliant boy, but he showed the handicap that the lack of experience imposes by his play in the last crucial series against the Yankees.

It follows from the rating above that either the Yankees or the Athletics would be better fortified at first base than the Pirates with Grantham or the Cubs with Grimm if they should happen to get into the series.

It is almost certain that Bottomley will not be able to play his best game in the world series if his services are needed. He is just out of an attack of flu and you don't snap out of that thing in a hurry. If anything should happen to him young Orsatti would have to be used and it would be a tough spot for him.

Gehrig also has not been in the best of shape, but he is suffering from wear and tear and he ought to be able to recover with even a brief rest.

The second basemen of the contending teams will be discussed in the next article.

MILLERS AGAIN TAKE LEAD IN ASSOCIATION

Indians Get Three Hits and Lose to Columbus Senators, 2-0

Chicago—(AP)—Mike Kelley and his fighting millers are back up there again—back in undisputed possession of first place in the sizzling American association pennant race.

Three hit pitching by Russell Millers, which enabled Columbus to stop Indianapolis, 2 to 0, and a most opportune error by Rigney, which was responsible for Minneapolis' 5 to 4 triumph over Kansas City, were the concomitants that pushed the Kelleyites into the front once more Friday by a full game.

Only eight more days remain of the hectic campaign and the two rivals each has 10 more games to play. This is how they stood Saturday:

Olivares returned to Louisville's line-up Friday and responded by getting a double and single, which drove in two runs and the Colonels beat Toledo, 2 to 0.

St. Paul and Milwaukee were tied at two-and-a-half when rain halted their game in the fifth inning. They were billed to play a twin bill at Milwaukee Saturday.

A Strange Role for Helen

After winning all the important titles that the big tournaments offered her, Helen Wills, woman's tennis champion of the world, had to spend the final period of the season watching the big men stars play. It isn't often that the California girl is caught playing the role of a spectator as she is shown above with Mrs. Langdon Post, New York society woman, at the men's national championships at Forest Hills. If it is necessary, it might be added that Miss Wills appears, on the left of the photograph.

Around The Sport World

OUT OF THE GAME CLEAN
Earl Sande, quitting the saddle to trail and race a stable of his own, leaves behind him an unusual and a unique record.

Never once in his long and brilliant career was a ride of his ever questioned or suspected. His reputation for honesty was so firmly established that in many cases bets were placed on his mounts because of the rider rather than the class of the horse.

Everyone always knew that with Sande in the saddle his horse would have to give everything he had. Sande was disciplined for rough riding tactics and the other jockeys complained bitterly that he could get away with anything. But they knew and the stewards knew that it was Sande's mania for winning that prompted him to take advantage of every opportunity to get the breaks for his mount.

NICE LITTLE HENRY
If the Yankees squeeze into the world series, decorations for valiant services will be pinned upon Tony Lazzeri, Babe Ruth, Bob Meusel and George Pippas for their great work in the crisis against the Athletics.

But young Henry Johnson belongs in there with the nobles. The young man not only licked Lefty Grove in a battle that may have been the deciding test of the championship race, but on four previous starts he downed the toughest rival of the Yankees and dropped only one game to them. Young Johnson may well be considered the Athletic killer of the Yankee staff.

SMART BUY, LITTLE HUG
The Yankee players give Miller Huggins the credit for some strategy that was responsible for winning the second game of the late series against the Athletics which seemed to break the heart of the A's.

In the early innings when Walberg was cutting down the Yanks as fast as they stepped out, Huggins told the players in the dugout: "That fellow is pitching too fast. Wait him out and make him work hard. He'll blow if he gets real tired."

And in the sixth inning Huggins told them: "He's going now with every ball he pitches. He's tired now and he can't last. Make him work and go after him."

And Walberg blew almost out of the ball yard.

WHY TURN PRO?
Vinnie Richards, optimistic about the possibility of open tennis tournaments in this country, intimates that Henri Cochet, the brilliant French star, may turn professional soon.

Cochet isn't so much of an amateur now, as he owns three sports goods stores in France and is paid $10,000 a year for using a certain kind of ball to the exclusion of others.

COCHET FAVORITE IN TENNIS FINALS

Three Americans and Lone Frenchman in Battle for Title

Forest Hills, N. Y. — (AP)—Three Americans and one Frenchman shared the semi-final bracket in the national tennis championship tournament Saturday but this does not mean that France has only one chance in four of gathering in Uncle Sam's proudest court title for the third successive year.

Henri Cochet was still the favorite Saturday, despite the fact that Frank Hunter, George Lott and Frank Shields remained in his path to the title his countryman, Rene Lacoste, won.

Cochet romped to easy victory over Gregory Mangin of Newark, N. J., 4-6, 6-3, 6-1, 6-2.

Henri let such an accident as the posting of a wrong score on the board and the consequent hooting of the crowd disturb him to such an extent that he lost a game on his service at love on four successive errors.

Cochet won, however, because he made fewer errors than the hard working youngster and because Mangin let some of the sting die out of his game in the effort to improve his control.

JONES, PERKINS TO BATTLE FOR AMATEUR GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

Briton Plays Steady Golf in Semi Round to Win from George Voigt

Newton, Mass. —(AP)—The recipe for winning the national open golf championship held true Saturday for the national amateur. All a golfer has to do to win either is to beat Bobby Jones.

The champion came to the finals with all his fellow Americans out of the picture and only a slim Briton, who can match Bobby's deadly artistry of approach shots, standing between him and his reelection as champion. He had only to beat Phil Perkins to be crowned amateur king for the fourth time. As for opening at home and abroad—he has been one-two in eight of the last nine he has entered.

The British challenger, champion of his country's far flung golfing realm, has carried British club plus in his golf bag in this championship and has revealed himself a truly great golfer—a far cry from the No. 1 man of the British Walker cup team whose game collapsed against Capt. Jones in the Walker cup matches at Wheaton.

Perkins has sized up the holes from behind his spectacles and sent his ball closer to the pin more consistently than any other player in the competition. He has putted well throughout and sensationally at times to the astonishment of the crowd.

Base Ball caddies who have watched him get his long putts down with a cigar in the corner of his mouth as they wondered how he kept the smoke out of his eyes.

To advance to the real shot at the championship, Perkins had to play great golf to stop George Voigt, black thatched New Yorker, medalist in a tournament. Although Jones was four up early in the day, George took him to luncheon only one down and finally squared the match at the second hole of the afternoon round. Then Perkins unrolled a string of threes and fours. Voigt succumbed six and four.

Jones coasted in to the right to defend his title, winning from Phillips Finley, Harvard sophomore but at least a junior in the golf college, by a margin of 13 and 12. The champion was hitting his tee shots off the line all day but was recovering with such consummate skill that his approach shots from the fairways.

His putter, as usual, was a warm friend. He scored as well as he would have done with straight driving but had to work harder for the low figures. He finished his day's work three under par.

The clash of champions leading to the championship found Jones the choice of most of the experts but he was not a top heavy favorite.

The unmistakable class of Perkins in his last two matches stamped him a real champion. The British titlist predicted before the semifinals that if he reached the finals Jones would not repeat his Wheaton massacre and end the match with 12 unplayed holes. Before the end of the play that was to name his opponent in the final he had announced agreement. Bob declared that the crushing reverse for Perkins

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

Connie Mack says that yarn that he signals his boys with a scorecard is all bunk. . . . And that the other players would have been wise 20 years ago if he did. . . . Harrison Johnson, the golfer, was shot up, gassed and shell shocked when he was playing with a machine gun on the French railways. . . . Casey Stengel has been hired to run the Toledo for another year. . . . The season football jackets that Harvard sells are hot numbers. . . . They do not admit bearers to the Dartmouth, Army, Penn or Yale games. . . . Doc King, who knocked off Hennessey in the tennis championships, is not a tooth fixer. . . . He's an M. D. . . . Bunny Austin, the British tennis player, doesn't wear a belt or gaiters. . . . And doesn't seem to fear.

GIANTS WIN FOURTH DOUBLE BILL FROM HORNSBY'S BRAVES

Cards Retain One Game Lead by Beating Phillies, 13 to 6

If John McGraw and his New York Giants could spend the rest of the season in Boston there would be nothing to this national league pennant struggle.

Eight times in four playing days did John's hirelings smash the hapless Braves into defeat and boosted themselves thereby into a position only one game distant from the league-leading St. Louis Cardinals.

So John returns to face the Brooklyn Dodgers in a single game and to take on the four powerful western clubs in succession. Good pitching by Eddy Fitzsimmons and Jack Scott gave the Giants both ends of the final twin-bill Friday, 6 to 2 and 5 to 1, the second game being called in the eighth because of darkness.

The Cardinals kept danger from growing into actual disaster by turning back the Phillies, 13 to 6.

Back of Burleigh Grimes' deadly effectiveness in the pinches, the Pittsburgh Pirates trounced the Cincinnati Reds, 4 to 1, and tightened their hold on fourth place.

Only one game was played in the American league, the St. Louis Browns losing to the Chicago White Sox, 5 to 4, in spite of Heinie Manush's furious hitting. The 1928 league batting champion drove in two runners ahead of him with a home run in the first inning and scored the other after he tripled in the eighth.

But the Browns made five errors and Manush's hitting couldn't atone for them.

Babson Explains What Call Money Rates Mean

Babson Park, Mass. — "Judging from much that is written and spoken nowadays on call loans and call money rates there is often a lack of a clear understanding of just what they are and how they fit into the financial picture. There are of course, several kinds of loans, and call loans differ from the others in certain vital respects. There are commercial loans, acceptances, mortgage loans, etc., but all of these are for longer duration than call loans, which are payable any time on 'call' demand. Also there is the kind of loan which the college boy wrote to his father for, and described as a 'Kathleen Mavourneen loan'—it may be for years and it may be forever! Call loans certainly are not that kind. They are either paid when called or the securities held by the bank as collateral are sold. Also, they may be paid off at any time the borrower wishes.

"The purpose of call loans is to finance dealings in securities. They are made by banks to brokers at rates fixed daily by a committee of the Stock Exchange. Many large city banks also place call loans for the account of their out-of-town correspondents, for individuals, and corporations. Usually the bank loans through a so-called 'money broker' who represents the bank either on salary or commission. Each day the lending bank determines the amount of surplus idle funds which it wishes to place temporarily in call loans. The bank notifies the loan broker of the amount, rate, and size of blocks in which it wishes its loans made. Ordinarily stock exchange loans are placed in blocks of $100,000 or over, but until the recent selling of the New York Clearing House banks making that figure a minimum, blocks of $25,000 up were occasionally placed.

"No note is used in making stock exchange call loans, but a contract which covers call loans so long as the broker continues to borrow is lodged with the bank. This contract gives the bank the right to sell the broker's securities deposited with it without further notice after a call for payment is made and is not forthcoming the same day. In calling a loan the bank notifies the broker before 12:15 and he must pay it before 2:15 P. M. and receive back his deposited securities. If he wishes he can arrange to obtain the loan elsewhere, a process known as 'shifting loans.' Thus call loans are a very liquid type of investment.

INTEREST ON LOANS
"As stated above, the rates on call loans are determined each day, and in times of great market activity such as the present are apt to fluctuate widely, depending upon the supply and demand. Although the interest rate may change many times during the month, the custom of the Street is for banks to collect their interest monthly.

"There is no limit to how high this interest rate may go. In times of financial stress such as in 1920 call money went to 25 per cent for brief time. Of course when the rate gets too high it is evidence of an overloaded condition and is a signal for caution. Liquidation of security markets is the only way such a situation is relieved. That is why many conservative bankers are today issuing warnings about the tremendous increase in brokers' loans and the rising call money.

CALL RATE TREND
"One year ago call money was quoted at 3 1/2 per cent. Today it is 7 per cent to 8 per cent, or more than double. Commercial paper loans have risen, 1 1/2 per cent to the current rate of 5 1/2 per cent, an increase of 37 per cent, and 30 day time money to 6 1/2 per cent, an increase of 60 per cent. In considering the advance in interest rates and the causes underlying them therefore, it is essential to distinguish between the various types of loans. "Call money without doubt is the most volatile and spectacular of all. It has always shown greater fluctuation in rates than commercial loans or time money, but this year has eclipsed all other for the sustained high rates. With the exception of a brief break in the middle of the month, rates held throughout August between 6 per cent and 8 per cent, averaging about 7 per cent.

LOANS AND BUSINESS
"New York banks have been accustomed to placing call loans for their correspondent outside banks and also for corporations and individual depositors who requested the service. The rising rates for call money have attracted huge amounts of such money from rich companies this year. While investing in the call market has long been practiced on a moderate scale by wealthy corporations and individuals, never before have they had so much surplus cash for investment. As a result when call rates were paying much higher than either bank deposits or bonds. As a result there has been an increase of over $100,000,000 in loans 'for others' since January 1 of this year. At the same time New York banks have been reducing their own call loans. Since the beginning of May these banks have reduced such loans from $1,200,000,000 to $750,000,000. This clearly shows that the vast sums of money now going into financing stock market are coming mostly from sources outside of New York City and to a large extent of the banking field entirely. Total brokers' demand loans on August 31 as reported by the New York Stock Exchange were $1,083,889,293 compared with $3,767,694,000 on July 31.

"This is not at all surprising. It is, however, somewhat galling to the banks. They are obliged to place loans for depositing corporations, insurance companies, investment trusts, individual investors, etc., at times to the exclusion of loans for their own account. They are limited in the amount they can lend for themselves in this way. Likewise they very rightly want to cooperate with the Federal Reserve board in its efforts to bring total stock market loans down to a safer level, and curb reckless speculations.

"As the consequence of the argument is put forward by the banks that their deposits are suffering from withdrawals of funds by depositors to place in call loans. As a matter of fact deposits as a whole cannot be permanently changed in this way. When a depositor withdraws money to place on call, that money does not go into some 'secret' office. It goes into the broker's deposit account in some other bank.

"The banks are determined, however, that they will charge something for placing call loans for the account of others. The new rules of the New York Clearing House banks for placing such loans. Also limit the amount of money to $100,000, thereby hoping to eliminate a lot of bothersome small blocks. These rules do not have any noticeable effect on the amount of new loans placed, and have not caused corporations to withdraw their call loans. The service charge 1/2 of 1 per cent still leaves a good margin for the banks. Call money rates, better than they can obtain on bank deposits or in short term bonds. Therefore, total brokers' loans continue to increase and the stock market situation becomes increasingly more dangerous.

M-L-O- Tone Radio Shop
Saves Radio Owners Time, Money With Quick Service

The radio service laboratory of the M-L-O Tone radio shop at 812 S. Kerna-ave has been remodeled and additional equipment installed to test and adjust all modern and old radios. The same kind of equipment used at the shop cannot be found anywhere north of theaukee. It consists of a complete tube testing panel for all makes of tubes, either D. C. or A. C. The testing panel is equipped to furnish complete operation of radio sets on signals and shows up any defects, such as distortion, cut outs, and others.

The panel also has a Wheatstone bridge for measuring resistances, transformers and other equipment. The local concern is in a position to give the people of Appleton and vicinity the best radio service at less cost than ever before. Many radios can be repaired or adjusted instead of junking them and buying new ones.

If it is necessary to send a set back to the factory it will cost a lot more and will include the loss of use of the machine, perhaps for a month or several months. The shop is in a position to give immediate service with the new equipment on defective sets and other radio equipment.

If you have any radio troubles that are bothering you and that have not been corrected to your satisfaction call the radio service department of the M-L-O tone shop and let them check your equipment. The shop is also equipped to change your old battery operated set over for use of new A. C. Tubes. This is not a very expensive change for anyone who wishes to use the new tubes. A lot more satisfaction will be experienced if you install new all electric equipment, because it will improve the reception to a degree which cannot be compared with the old type.

Madison—(P)—The petition of the city of Racine for rehearing the state supreme court of its overruled verdict of the state gasoline tax, may be decided upon by the high bench within a week, according to indications in the court chambers early in the week.

FEWER USING PHONE SERVICE OVER ATLANTIC

Paris—(P)—The demand for transatlantic telephone service has steadily decreased since the day of inauguration last April when it was a novelty.

The first four months of the service results in 2,600 calls being put through from Paris to New York and points in the middle west. The average during the first weeks was 25 to 30 calls daily and this figure has now dropped to 20 and below.

Telephone service by wireless has recently been opened between Paris and the Far East. Conversations are carried by a land wire to Amsterdam and there relayed to Java by government radio.

How to make this task simpler and easier is discussed in a booklet which this bureau has for distribution. Any reader can secure a copy of this government publication by filling out and mailing the coupon below, enclosing four cents in coin or stamps for return postage and handling.

Our Presidents

In the election of 1824 all the candidates called themselves Republicans, though they differed greatly in their ideas. No one received a majority of votes so the House of Representatives chose John Quincy Adams of Massachusetts, son of John Adams, the Federalist president, although Andrew Jackson had received a greater number of votes. President Adams and Congress often disagreed.

During Adams' term the Erie Canal was completed and New York grew tremendously, both in population and wealth reaped from trade with the west.

Adams had great faith in the growth of the country and he wanted to annex Texas, Cuba and Canada and extend the United States to the Pacific.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS

ANDREW JACKSON

At the end of Adams' term the Constitution had been in operation for forty years. During that time Virginians had been presidents for thirty-two years and Massachusetts men eight. Thus at the election of 1828, Adams, a candidate for re-election, was badly defeated by Andrew Jackson, hero of New Orleans. Jackson, native of North Carolina, had made his home in Tennessee.

CHILD IS INJURED
IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Slippery Concrete Turn Results in Car Turning Over into Ditch

Special to Post-Crescent
New London—Miss Dorothy Zaig, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Luker of Stanton, Ill., who suffered a fracture of the collar-bone and cuts in the eye and forehead in an auto accident recently is reported as recovering nicely and is suffering no further ill effects and his complete recovery is anticipated. The accident happened at Dead Man's curve near Theresa when Mrs. Luker, her son and daughter were returning to their home after an extended visit here with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Jelleff. They were accompanied by Miss Ismae Stofer of this city.

Mrs. Luker, who was driving, lost control of the car when it skidded on slippery concrete during a hard rain. The car turned completely around and tipped over in the ditch. The passengers were pinned within the car and only the presence of mind on the part of Mrs. Luker in turning off the engine, saved them from probable severe injuries. Assisted by nearby farmers, they placed the car upon the road and passing tourists from Chicago drove it under its own power to Milwaukee. The injured child was given first aid treatment by a physician at the scene of the accident. Later was taken to Milwaukee. Other members of the party were pinned with the exception of severe bruises and shock. After spending the night in Milwaukee, they proceeded to Stanton. Little damage was done to the car.

IMPROVED ROADS BRING
BETTER FARM CONDITIONS

Special to Post-Crescent
New London—The improvement of roads in this township, pointed out, invariably has a good effect upon property owners, and this is easily seen to be a fact when traveling along County trunk V, between this city and Readfield. This stretch, much of it leading through low lands, was once a road to be avoided. Especially was this true during the spring thaws and fall rainy season. It is now an excellent road, every mile of the distance between here and the point where it joins the concrete of hard gravel surface. Along the way one notices improvements which have taken place on farm buildings and grounds since the road was rebuilt about two years ago. Orchards, long neglected, are pruned and well kept shrubbery and flowers, and neat farmyards meet the eye and in a few cases there are successful attempts at landscape gardening.

At the James Cottrell farm the driveway is marked by neatly painted boxes of blossoming flowers, while farmyard and lawn are kept in splendid condition. Perhaps the most marked beauty is noticed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Gorges. A long stretch of green for a lawn remains uninclosed, and well placed groups of native shrubbery and fir trees add attractiveness. A note of decided beauty is the boulevard stretch, which has been planted with red geraniums along the highway.

gave their version of their connection with the two stolen cars which Paul Krueger, now serving a sentence in state prison for having possession of stolen property, sold in Appleton, their stories differ from the one told by Chief of Police, George T. Prim, chief of police.

Chief Prim said that McKenzie had purchased both stolen cars from Krueger, whereas McKenzie claimed Saturday he had merely financed the deal for Mark Handier and Edward Phillips, members of the Chrysler firm at Neenah. Mr. McKenzie said the People's Loan and Finance company was not connected with the affair at all. He presented correspondence which corroborated his statements.

Mr. McKenzie's statement follows:

"Early last July Handier came to me and told me that Paul Krueger, who said he was an agent for the General Motors Acceptance company, Detroit, Mich., had offered to sell his two Chrysler cars that had been repossessed by the firm. He said the cars were good buys and that he thought he could make some money on the deal so I agreed to finance it and I personally loaned them the money."

"I HARKS CAR IS STOLEN" He talked to Krueger and he presented evidence and also gave me a certificate of title for one of the machines and promised the other in a few days. On the basis of these references I thought the deal was all right and advanced the money."

"Handier then sold the car to Lewis Popp, of Appleton. I had nothing to do with the sale myself although Chief Prim said I had sold the cars."

"After Popp bought the car we learned from the secretary of state, after a license had been issued, that the car was stolen, and so Popp agreed to hold the car until we could arrange a trap to catch Krueger. I wrote the secretary of state that another car had been purchased from Krueger and gave him the description and we learned that that car also had been stolen. By that time I had heard from the General Motors Acceptance company at Detroit and learned that Krueger was not their agent."

"I immediately telephoned Sheriff Otto Zuehlke and discussed the matter about Krueger with him." Sheriff Otto Zuehlke Saturday morning agreed that he had had a telephone conversation with McKenzie. Copies of correspondence which McKenzie had exchanged with the secretary of state, also corroborated his statement.

"Then I learned that the Burns Detective agency had listed the two machines as stolen and I wired that firm," McKenzie continued.

He showed the telegram as proof. "When I learned that the both cars had been stolen I took possession of the machine that had not yet been sold and I kept it pending word from the secretary of state and the Burns Detective agency. There had been several opportunities to dispose of the car but we would not sell it."

"Finally last Sunday when Phillips learned that Krueger was in town he telephoned my wife, as per a previous arrangement. I was not at home and my wife took the call. She immediately telephoned Chief Prim and gave him a description of both Krueger and the machine he was driving it was this description that led to Krueger's arrest."

"I asked Chief Prim to allow me to retain possession of the machines until the owners came after them, because I wanted to see if we could arrange to get some of the money back which had been paid Krueger. I also asked the chief to allow me to talk with Krueger but he was sent off to prison without even informing me of what had transpired. The correspondence I had with the secretary of state and the Burns Detective agency was in the hands of the chief and was used as evidence against Krueger."

McKenzie said he refused to turn the cars over to the police on advice from his attorneys.

Mr. Popp denied telling Chief Prim that he had purchased the car from McKenzie, saying he bought the car from Handier. He also denied saying he was going to hold McKenzie responsible for the money he had paid for the machine.

McKenzie stated that when C. H. Kalons, owner of the car which he was holding, arrived in Appleton Friday to take possession of the machine, Chief Prim and Kalons called at his office.

"I asked Chief Prim to allow me to talk to Kalons," Mr. McKenzie said, "but he refused and left the office and took possession of the machine which was stored at a local garage."

WIDE SPECULATION DURING THIS WEEK

Advance Interrupted at Time
by Bear Raids and Changes in Money Rates

BY STANLEY W. PRENOSIL
Associated Press Financial Editor
New York—(P)—Speculation in stocks continued on an unusually broad scale in this week's stock market. The advance was interrupted, at times, by flurries in money rates and occasional "bear raids," particularly against the amusement issues, but nearly all active groups showed substantial gains on the week. Trading continued at a pace not far below that of the wild markets last spring which culminated in the June break.

Increased public participation in the market was reflected in the increase of more than $95,000,000 in brokers' loans, and the marked expansion in odd lot business involving transactions of 1 to 99 shares. Call money ruled between 7 and 8 per cent.

Speculation in the stock market reached its greatest intensity in the amusement shares which were heavily bought. Expectations of large fourth quarter earnings, reports of record-breaking August steel ingot output and a substantial increase in the August unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation provided the background for the advance in the steel shares.

Motors were under brisk accumulation on reports of record-breaking mid-summer sales and production of the leading manufacturers. General Motors advanced to within a fraction of the year's high on expectations of a substantial extra cash dividend at the November meeting of directors. Chrysler, Packard and Hupp also sold at the year's best prices.

Revival of activity and strength in the oil shares was based on reports that leaders of the industry in the United States and Europe were giving serious attention to the question of world curtailment of crude. Barnsdall, midcontinent and Texas Corporation were the leaders in the advance.

36 BABIES EXAMINED AT SHIOCTON CLINIC

Thirty-six babies were examined at an infant and preschool clinic at Shiocton Thursday afternoon, according to a report from Miss Marie Klein, county nurse, who assisted in the examinations. Miss Ellen Raether, and Dr. E. Hutchinson of the state health department, also assisted at the clinic, and Mrs. F. O. Towne, Shiocton, was local chairman.

Miss Klein said that while no serious diseases or ailments were discovered in any of the children examined, a number of cases of improper and irregular feeding were found and proper advice on the matter was given to the mothers. The next clinic will be held at Shiocton on Oct. 11.

Directors Indorse Annual Drive for Funds by Salvation Army

The financial condition of Appleton chapter of commerce as of the six months period ending Sept. 30, is the best in years, according to a report made at a meeting of directors Friday noon at Conway hotel. There will be almost $100 left when bills are paid at the end of the year. A year ago there was a deficit of almost $1,100, it is said.

Directors of the chamber indorsed the coming drive of the Salvation Army for funds and made arrangements to have drive headquarters in the basement of the insurance building. Chris Isley, a graduate of Lawrence college, is in charge of the drive.

Fred Schlitz, chairman of the better roads committee of the chamber, informed directors that at their request, he has extended an invitation to members of the county highway committee through A. G. Brusewitz, highway commissioner, to attend the Oct. 12 meeting of the board and that the invitation has been accepted.

Work on a large map of highways in Outagamie, Winnebago and Calumet counties is progressing favorably, Mr. Schlitz said, and the map soon will be ready. It will be used by the good roads committee of the chamber for reference work.

The directors also approved a plan of the Wisconsin State Motor Association of the American Automobile association to start a branch office here.

POCAHONTAS COAL SLIGHTLY HIGHER

The fuel market has remained fairly stable for several months, and no changes occurred except in the price of Pocahontas coal which advanced a few dollars per ton, a month ago. Dealers say that if the wholesale price increases much more fuel prices will advance before Oct. 15.

START COUNT OF PORTO RICAN DEAD

Information regarding crops destroyed. He thought it probable that injury to fruits was considerable, to banana quite large and coffee very great.

Farmers and workmen were pressed into service to clear the streets of debris.

UNIVERSITY LOSS $300,000 Chancellor Benner said that all except two buildings of the University of Porto Rico were damaged, probably beyond repair. One of the undamaged buildings was the new dormitory for girls. He placed the loss at $300,000 and asserted the institution would probably have to close for a time at least.

Probably the greatest suffering among the masses will be due to the destruction of bananas and other minor crops off which they live. Little of these crops was believed to be left standing.

The coffee crop of which little had been gathered and which had been estimated to be worth $15,000,000 was the cause of serious concern.

The unmarketed citrus crop of oranges and grapefruit was believed to have been destroyed with groves badly damaged as well.

JAY WALKER VS MOTORIST

THE PEDESTRIAN "may say that if he chooses to risk life or limb, that is his own affair; but it is not his own affair if he forces another citizen to be his partner in a serious accident. THE JAY WALKER RARELY INDULGES HIS WILLFULNESS AT HIS OWN EXPENSE."

THE above is an excerpt from an editorial which recently appeared in a nationally known periodical. It hits at one of the greatest evils and hazards of the city street.

Impulse prompts you to step off the curb in the middle of a block without thought of the consequence You dodge between cars you frighten the motorist he cannot command control of his brakes as speedily as is necessary

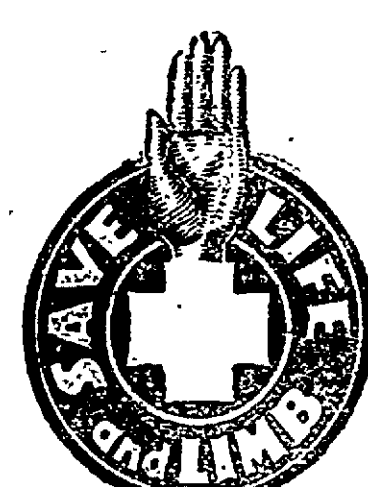

JAY WALKER versus MOTORIST . . . on one hand we have the fellow who is either lazy or in a hurry . . . he thinks that he is taking his own chance . . . that it is his own business. On the other hand . . . we have the fellow engaged in the serious business of driving his car . . . responsible for his own life and property . . . responsible for the lives of others.

And the pity of it is THE JAY WALKER DOES NOT REALIZE THAT HE IS AS MUCH RESPONSIBLE FOR HIS OWN LIFE AND THE LIVES OF OTHERS, AS THE FELLOW DRIVING THE CAR

The Jay Walker is not only lazy But He Is Selfish For his own personal gain of a few minutes just a few short steps he would endanger the lives of others.

Don't take that chance Don't follow the path of the Jay Walker to destruction . . . take a few more steps The Safe Route SACRIFICE A FEW MOMENTS . . . Be wise and at the same time considerate of others
